

MRS. MAXINE HEATH

When Richard J. Sandlands, U.S. Prohibition Agent, met his death on John Heath's yacht in the Detroit River, Mrs. Heath was a witness of the struggle between her husband and the officer, which ended in the latter having his neck broken. Heath, who is under arrest in Detroit, claims he thought Sandlands was a hi-jacker.

Man in the Moon

A hypocrite is one who pretends not to be what he is.

We know the Bible story of Balaam was true because we have found that the ass is always talking.

Minx meat is all right if it is cut from a tender minx.

This morning our wonderful delegation left for the Peace. The Irishman the Dutchman the Englishman and the Scot. Hope they don't play games of chance or I know which will carry home the spoils.

A delegation of four Thank heaven there no more, Or the people of the east Vancouver and the beast Will be sure to get sore.

Jake says he thinks I should write an elegy to the weather. As I have said before, Jake is always saying something foolish.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day, Across the harbor Sol seems to delay, His going as he spreads his gleams around, For rainclouds have departed, joys abound.

Ten Years Ago in Prince Rupert

September 3, 1919

The school board decided at a special meeting last night to open a new room at Seal Cove and also one downtown if suitable quarters can be obtained. An additional room has already been opened at the high school.

A dozen houses are now under construction in the city, under the Soldiers' Housing Scheme, Mayor McClymont reported last night, and it is not the fault of the city that others are not already under way.

Only people and money are required to make a great agricultural district in the central interior, states R. C. W. Lett, G. T. P. industrial and colonization agent, who is in the city.
