WOMEN KILLED ON AIR LINER

Big Mail Plane Was Named "City of Ottawa" Engine Trouble Developed

LONDON, June 18.—The Imperial Airways air liner which crashed into Folkestone Harbor yesterday, killing seven passengers and injuring others, was named the "City of Ottawa." It left Croydon at 10:30 yesterday morning and was over the Channel on its way to France when trouble developed. The pilot turned back and attempted to reach shore but was forced to come down beside a trawler, which rushed to its aid.

The plane landed with a crash and turned over, being partly submerged. It was apparent that engine trouble had developed. The pilot could be observed making a great attempt to bring down the heavy liner on the water as smoothly as possible.

Seven women were aboard, three of whom were killed. The plane was shattered from end to end. The casualty list stood early this morning as follows:

Dead and bodies recovered: Adolph Meier, manufacturer of New Jersey; Leon T. Malcolm, vice-president of Malcolm & Souter Furniture Company of Hamilton, Ont.; Alfred Smith, Melbourne, Australia; Mrs. Ickerson, address not given.

The missing are Mrs. Bosiger of London; Miss Roberts, London; Mrs. Koracki, London, believed to be the stage name of a Mrs. Oerzon of Amsterdam.

The rescued and recovering from shock are Mrs. Fleming, a relative of Mrs. Ickerson; Miss M. Smith, daughter of Alfred Smith; H. W. Tatham, American, possibly of Minneapolis; Capt. R. J. Brallin, pilot; M. Barnett, flight engineer.

PROGRESS IS MADE TOWARD GENERAL PEACE

Reports to Women's Organizations Deplore Governmental Action Of Nations

SASKATOON, June 18.—Public opinion and governmental dictions favor world peace, but actions by nations do not support the opinions, Mrs. E. Duell of Dundurn, Sask., reported yesterday to the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, meeting here. "Increase rather than decrease of armaments is visible on all sides," she declared.

"The League of Nations is perhaps most valuable by reason of the international contacts which its rather intricate machinery creates," said the report. "Mark, however, the slow progress when league activities come into conflict with vested interests as in the case of the opium traffic."

Suggested provincial peace conferences of women's organizations were supported by the report, which commented that they would further vocalize the demand for peace. Canada's approval of the optional clause of signature of the Peace Pact, and Hon. Raul Dandurand's plea for the rights of racial minorities were approved.

Instruction in League of Nations activities has been included directly in the school course of each province, without exception, it was noted, while women's institutes and home-makers' clubs have placed the subject on local programs.

Five Royal Bank Employees Bound and Gagged today and Robber Took Away $5,000

VANCOUVER, June 18.—Greeting each member of the staff as he arrived for work with a threatening gun, a cool, youthful bandit this morning held up five clerks of the Royal Bank of Canada on Commercial Drive, generally known as the Grandview branch, and escaped with $5000 in cash.

The gunman, who apparently had hid in the premises overnight, went about the holdup in a systematic manner, trussing up each clerk with a rope and placing each prone on the floor behind the counter.

As he conquered each new arrival the bandit talked cheerily to the victims. Observing a policeman standing on the corner, he observed: "I'm in a tight fix. There's a bull."

The gunman quietly completed his work and, wait-quietly until the policeman resumed his beat, slipped out the back door.

Wilson Wark, clerk, was the first to reach the bank. He was about to go to his desk when a youth rushed from the cashier's cage and covered him with a revolver. Wark was compelled to lie on the floor while the youth trussed him up with light but strong line.

J. Healy, junior clerk, met the same fate on his arrival. The next was Manager J. W. Logan, and so on.

When one clerk hesitated on the door step the bandit said, "Come on in. This is a bank holdup."

Before trussing up the cashier the bandit forced him at gun point to open the safe and hand over a large parcel of currency.

The bandit was about five feet six inches tall, aged about 20, and this description clears the so-called "Phantom Bandit" who has been figuring in smaller holdups from being the principal in this case.
