NARCOTICS AND THE LEAGUE

For more than nine years the league has been working industriously on this great problem and has made some real progress. There is, of course, a big opposition, particularly in Eastern countries, to any limitation, as such would mean a big loss in revenue.

The Assembly got close to an eventual settlement of the question when it decided to hold a conference of all the manufacturing and some of the consuming countries with the idea of framing an agreement for reducing the manufacture of opium and other narcotics to the amount required for medical and scientific purposes.

In framing this resolution, which will be taken up this year, its sponsors had in view a real and concerted attack on the illicit drug traffic.

This traffic is one of the most deadly and wide-spread of social evils. From central European headquarters directly in touch with agents in the East narcotics in huge quantities are spread throughout the world and as there are immense profits in the trade it has flourished for many years despite the constant efforts of the regular and secret police.

If the league formulates a plan by which the source of the drugs could be cut off, it would be performing a major service to humanity. Its efforts in this direction call attention to the fact that the league is not only an agency for preventing war, but that it has engaged in an immense cooperative battle against sickness, labor unrest and problems affecting better trade relations amongst member states.
