COPPER RIVER DEVELOPMENT

The proposal to work the Copper River coal deposits est snow in the past twenty. and to build a railway was very clearly set forth yesterday years fell throughout this and in an article written by E. A. Haggen for the Sunday neighboring states yesterday giv-Province. It seems that the company expects to get timber lands between Copper City and Kitimaat as a bonus trains were delayed and motor for building the line.

We believe that every possible encouragement should temperature last night was 12 be given this line, not because of its plan to build a line to Kitimaat, but because it will connect with the Canadian National and use Prince Rupert as its shipping port, something that Mr. Haggen failed to say.

Railway building is extremely difficult in this part of winter is departing. Yesterday the world. The cost is very high, but timber, of course, is the thermometer was 19 degrees much the same as cash. It has a marketable value just above zero but today it is much now, which inaccessible land has not.

SLAPS AND STAMPS

(Edmonton Journal)

Hist! Canada is becoming German! You don't believe it was reported that all the it? Listen to this and be convinced; it is taken from the streets had been cleared and the London Pictorial Weekly. The writer says:

Already the province of Saskatchewan is really non-British. Saskatchewan postage stamps, which used to be in English and have the King's head upon them, are now bilingual, and the King's head has been removed, and these are but a few of the indications of the invasion of Canada by Germans and other foreigners.

Poor Premier Gardiner. To be sure he is a Liberal, Italy. and some people wouldn't put anything past a Liberal. But even a Liberal, or a U.F.A., or a Conservative provincial premier could hardly issue a set of postage stamps for the special use of the people of his province, as the post office department is under federal control.

WEATHER COMPARISONS

Vancouver, which is so fond of taking jibes at Prince Rupert's weather, has the joke turned on itself this winter, although Prince Rupert people are magnanimous about it and are not making too much fun.

While Prince Rupert has had no snow on the ground so far (touch wood), Vancouver people have been plowing around this week in eighteen inches of the beautiful and, to cap the climax, had its coldest weather in thirteen years yesterday when the thermometer dropped to seven above zero. Just the week before that, Vancouver people could hardly travel the streets-they were so slippery as a result of a sudden frost coming after copious rainfall. Prince Rupert has been practically free from slippery streets throughout the winter and the coldest snap here was one degree warmer than Vancouver's.

Prince Rupert people may have thought during the past few days that they have been having a rather tough winter but, to get a real taste of it, we would recommend a trip to Vancouver, where it does snow and it does freeze in spite of the vaunted superiority over this city five hundred miles to the north. And the comparison in Prince Rupert's favor this navigator of the Southern Cross, winter is not exceptional as may be found with a check-up will take on his planned Bostonof this town's winter meteorological figures and those motored monoplane now under ideal ones of Vancouver over the years.
