VALUE OF PLANES TO PROSPECTORS

Governor Parks of Alaska Tells Seattle People What is Being Done in North

SEATTLE, Jan. 31.—Alaska prospectors are flying high these days, declares Governor George Parks, who is here on his way to the north. The airplane has revolutionized Alaska travel, the governor said, and will do more for the Territory.

Last year machines flew a quarter of a million miles in Alaska without accident.

Governor Parks believes that there is a great need now for low-priced radio transmitting systems, permitting outlying sections to call planes. He expressed interest in the Seattle-Ketchikan-Juneau air mail service, saying he believes it will develop a considerable express business in furs.

"Airplanes greatly encouraged prospecting last year," Governor Parks pointed out. "The legislature appropriated $20,000 to pay travelling expenses of prospectors with a limit of $150 to any man. Numbers went out from the cities in all parts of the Territory, a majority of them by plane. These men will be coming in shortly and many have arranged to be picked up by plane. I will not be surprised if discoveries made by some of these prospectors open up profitable strikes."

KETCHIKAN MILL IS RUNNING FULL TIME

Good Demand There for Box Lumber and Clear Spruce Reports

KETCHIKAN, Jan. 31.—"Not since 1925 have we been booked to capacity as we are this year, with order for box shooks, railroad ties and clear spruce," said Eldon J. Daly, manager of the Ketchikan Spruce Mills, who returned to Ketchikan recently from the states.

"With our other business, the Sunny Point Packing Company placed orders with us which will keep the box factory busy all season," he added. "This company placed orders with us for all of their shooks for the Ketchikan plant, the Chomley plant, and the Rose Inlet cannery."

"We have been awarded the contract for the lumber for the rebuilding of the Libby, McNeill and Libby plant at George Inlet. They are now calling for bids for the construction work, which probably will start about March 1."

"The Alaska railroad has placed with us an order for ties, amounting to about 1,500,000 feet, for delivery this spring and early summer."

"The general lumber situation looks brighter than in some time. The demand for clear spruce is good and it appears that we will be able to dispose of all we produce and at prices which are quite satisfactory."

Speaking of the cannery consolidations, Mr. Daly said he found in Seattle that the companies plan on putting up capacity packs this year, or as nearly so, as conditions surrounding the industry will permit. Unusual activity was noted in the preparations for the season.
