TAKING LONG SHOT

The Wheat Pool is evidently taking a long shot. That is the opinion of the manager of the Canada Steamship Lines. That it is the biggest gamble in wheat since the beginning of time is the opinion of many.

What is being done is to hold back from the market practically the whole crop of Canada in the hope that prices will advance and allow the wheat to be marketed later at an advance. The Canadian banks are helping to finance the project and if the Pool wins, the farmers of Canada will benefit and indirectly the whole nation.

What will be the outcome? Pool officials say the condition of the world supply does not warrant selling now at present prices. They think there will be a demand for Canadian wheat and that it will yet be sold at prices high enough to pay for storage charges.

In the meantime, the plans of the railway companies, the steamship companies and others are very much disarranged and it is possible that Pacific ports will benefit from the hold back, as much of the later shipments will have to come west.

DEVELOPMENT OF NORTH

So rapid has been the development of the northern parts of Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific that churches and other organizations have found it difficult to keep pace with the growth. In these new districts with plenty of natural wealth, there is a struggle with nature going on which absorbs both the time and money of those living there. They have little to spend on such things as churches and little wish for them. They are absorbed in their work.

To provide for this situation the people of the older and more settled parts of the world where surplus wealth is abundant, are to be asked to help. The Anglican Church is to make a wide appeal for funds and other churches are also busy along similar lines. All talk everywhere is of the north. It is the forward march of the age.

TALK PACIFIC OUTLET

Bishop Rix has set the pace at Vancouver by talking about Prince Rupert being the natural outlet of the Peace River. This is a good lead. We suggest to every person in Prince Rupert and district that they follow the lead wherever they go. Let us all use every possible opportunity to impress upon people everywhere that Prince Rupert is the natural outlet. We believe that this city will get much of the product of the Peace and we are anxious that no false move shall be made. It is wonderful what the enthusiasm of a small community can do.

It costs a lot to live these days, but think how much we get for our money.

STRESEMANN DIED TODAY

Famous German Statesman Passed Away Suddenly at Early Hour

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister and possibly the most outstanding statesman in the country, died suddenly early today.

In the chaotic conditions that gripped Germany for several years after the World War, Gustav Stresemann rose up as an antidote like oil on troubled waters.

It was as if Stresemann stood by while others tried this policy and that without producing anything like a semblance of order and then stepped in to thrust upon the country his own ideas and schemes. And usually he emerged successful.

What he proposed often was at the risk of sacrificing his position in national affairs. His leadership, however, turned these risks into successful events and his achievements made of him an outstanding international figure.

"The greatest post-war statesman of Germany," was a characterization often made of him.

It was Stresemann who put an end to the Cuno policy of passive resistance in the Ruhr Valley and in its stead instituted a policy of reconciliation with Germany's former enemies.

Together with Chancellor Marx he represented Germany in the London conference that led to the adoption of the Dawes plan and a year later, in February, 1925, suggested the idea of a security pact with France.

He won over Dr. Hans Luther, then chancellor, to the advantages of non-aggression pact, and with him went to London to help draft the famous Locarno treaties. It was he who secured Germany's agreement to the renunciation of Alsace and Lorraine and finally, he negotiated and steered Germany's entrance into the League of Nations.

All these events, of tremendous importance in the reestablishment of economic order in Germany, were accomplished by Stresemann long before he was 50 years of age.

For his ability to change his political creed and adapt himself to the new order of things, brought about by changing conditions, he often was called "The Lloyd George of Germany." How completely he could change in the course of events was indicated by his new attitude toward the republic.

As late as 1923, Stresemann clung to his belief in a "Volkskaisertum"—a monarchy headed by an emperor chosen by the people. Three years later, addressing a convention of German students, he asserted his willingness "to protect the republic with my own body."

Stresemann, twice chancellor and five times foreign minister, was born in Berlin May 10, 1878, the son of a restaurant keeper. He showed promise as a boy and his father, at considerable sacrifice, sent him through the universities of Berlin and Leipzig. He specialized in economics and political science.

After leaving college in 1901 he became assistant to the general secretary of the Association of German Chocolate Manufacturers. Two years later he was chosen general secretary of the League of Saxon Industrialists.

From this vantage point he made his jump into politics, affiliating with the National Liberal Party. He was elected to the Reichstag in 1907 as a candidate of that party and became a devoted follower of Bassermann, the party's leader and chairman. Ten years later, upon Bassermann's death, Stresemann succeeded to his post as head of the party.

In 1918 he formed and assumed chairmanship of the German people's party. He was married and the father of two sons.

Should Study Orient Urges Lunch Speaker

EDMONTON, Oct. 2.—Urging Alberta's weekly newspaper editors to do all in their power to spread a greater knowledge of the peoples of the Orient, and of their needs, in view of the growing economic importance of these countries to Canada, George H. Van Allen, president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, addressed delegates to the annual conference of the Alberta Newspaper Association at luncheon here, on the subject, "Why We Must Study the Orient."

Adopt Western Ideals
In the countries bordering the Pacific basin, Mr. Van Allen pointed out, there were over a billion people. Changing conditions which followed the world war, were bringing to the people of China, Japan, India and Australasia more and more western ideals.

As a result, the Japanese, for instance, were eating western food, wearing western clothes, and demanding western goods and produce in their daily lives.

Canada, it was true, had for export only the surplus product of her natural resources, her mines, forests, fields and fisheries, but as it happened, these products were the very ones which the people of the Orient were needing the most.

There was a great demand for western wheat, flour and meat; for pulp, paper and lumber; for furs, hides, butter, etc., and all these things, one or other of the western provinces was able to supply, while today, for the first time, automobiles—now greatly in demand in the Orient.

Vast Potentialities

The speaker closed by urging weekly newspaper editors to take cognizance of this growing trend in the Orient, and to do all in their power to bring home to western producers the vast potentialities of the market which was developing at Canada's western gate—the Pacific Ocean.

SCIENTISTS ARE IN CALIFORNIA TODAY TO STUDY EARTHQUAKES

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 3.—More accurate measurement of the speed of earthquakes and of their wave rays are the most pressing problems to be discussed by a small but select group here beginning tomorrow. Two of the seismologists come from Europe and the rest from this country. The seismological laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Washington and the California Institute of Technology, which rests on the bed rock of the Annapolis hills near here, will be the meeting place. Dr. Harry Wood is in charge of the sessions.

Among the scientists who attend will be Dr. H. Jefferys of Cambridge University, England; Dr. Beno Gutenberg of Germany; Prof. Harry F. Reid, John Hopkins University; James B. MacEwan, St. Louis University; Dr. L. H. Adams, geophysical laboratory, Carnegie Institute; Dr. Berkeley Byerly, University of California.

Admiral W. Oswald Storey C. B. E., R. N. R., supervisor of Sea Cadets for Canada, was guest and speaker at the luncheon of the Rotary Club in the Commodore Cafe today. He spoke of the work of the Sea Cadets. G. A. Bryant, president of the club, occupied the chair, the program having been arranged by H. F. Pullen.

Dancing Party In Nurses' Home

Members of Graduate and Student Nursing Staff Hostesses at Affair Last Evening

Members of the graduate and student nursing staff of the Prince Rupert General Hospital gave a delightful dancing party to their friends in the Nurses' Home last night. About thirty-five persons were present and the affair proved most enjoyable to all. Delicious refreshments were served and balloons and other novelties contrived to make the party a very lively one. Music was furnished by Al Small's orchestra.

GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

OUR TIME IS SHORT. Stock and Fixtures Must be Sold

A WORD FROM MRS. FRIZZELL

After twenty years in business in Prince Rupert, I have decided to close out the store and fixtures and take a much needed rest.

I want to thank all those old friends and customers who have helped to make this business possible.

I retire with the heartiest thanks and good wishes to all Prince Rupert and her people.

You may buy with confidence. Each and every item and price has my personal guarantee.

Thank you.
S. FRIZZELL.

The Loss is Ours. Yours the Gain.

Gigantic Sale at Colossal Reductions

Now, ladies, we might easily fill the whole of this paper with descriptions and prices of the thousands of items—Hats, Dresses, Coats, Lares, Hosiery, Sweaters, Underwear, etc., for women and children—but we spare you that infliction.
