BAD INDICATION

When there is a succession of bank robberies, it is an indication of an undesirable condition. Usually it means that there are men to whom the future looks black and who are willing to take the risk of capture rather than face a future of hunger. It may also mean that the bandits, judging by experience of others, see a good chance of getting away. That is why the robberies of Saturday an earthquake; others believed that the end of the world had come. The prove such good reading. Neither man got away.

A more desirable condition would be one under which no one would wish to rob a bank because every person apart from nearby settlements. would have enough to eat and to spare and there would be no degenerates who would wish to use violence to secure the means of livelihood.
