THE CHURCH IN LIFE OF A COUNTRY

Dean Gibson Gives Interesting and Instructive Address To Rotary Club

"In its normal action religion is a unifying influence in the state. It gives the sanction of conscience and of precept to the law and sanctity to the obligation of an oath. It hallowes the relations of family life. It develops education and character. It instils a spirit of self-sacrifice for an ideal. It places at the disposal of public authorities many means of relief or prevention in the crusade against social evils. It creates sympathy and co-operation on a large scale and trains men and women in the management of organizations. It develops leaders and centres of social influence."

This was a closing paragraph from the address of Dean Gibson of St. Andrew's Cathedral in an address to the Rotary Club yesterday when the principal of the high school and members of the senior matriculation class were guests of the club at luncheon. It was a quotation from the Roman Catholic Archbishop McNeill of Toronto.

Early History
Mr. Gibson gave a very instructive address on "The Influence of the Church On Canadian Life." While he disclaimed the ability to deal with the whole subject in a quarter of an hour, he touched on a great many high lights. He told how Jacques Cartier, when he landed on Canadian shores, set up a huge wooden cross and offered worship to God. Champlain had the idea of a new world and asked for the aid of the church. Four missionaries of the Recollet Fathers went to Canada, one going up the Ottawa River to work among the Hurons. Then came the Jesuit Fathers, who taught the natives to live decent Christian lives.

Coming down to modern times, Dean Gibson spoke of the wonderful work of such men as Father Duncan, Archdeacon Collison and others who had been the means of changing the warlike tribes of the coast to peaceful citizens such as they are today. Father Maurice in the interior also did great work among the natives.

Things of Spirit
Today the schools and colleges looked after the training of the body and mind, but it was the work of the church to cultivate the things of the spirit. Nations, like people, developed certain characteristics. Canada was developing integrity, faith, industry and brotherly love. These did not come from educational system or resources so much as from the churches. The average Canadian had a deep sense of honesty and integrity which made business credit possible. It was not the vault in the bank that made the safety box secure, but the integrity of the employees. From whence did this integrity come but from the Christian church?
"Without faith it was impossible to do anything great," declared the speaker. "And this faith is not developed from the resources of the nation but from the people. It is developed by the churches. The church is the only vital force which makes and protects our communities."

Man in the Moon

Blessed are the dumb. They do not have to answer for their sins.

I knew a man
And he was dumb,
He had politicians
Under his thumb.
He could not talk.
But he could say
Things should be done
In the proper way.

The unwritten law may be all right but there's a man at Penticton today who does not seem to be getting the benefit of it.

If you waken, call me early
Call me early, mother dear,
For I'm the bird that gets up early
To work for a worm that we all fear.

"Ellaïne has become engaged to an Irishman."
"Oh, really?"
"No, O'Reilly."
