Mountain Goat Escapes From Pacific Corral

Lasooed There When Cornered By Dogs After Crossing the River

Saturday morning at Pacific a big, wild billy goat swam across the Skeena River at Pacific. Two dogs chased it and cornered it at the section house where it was lassooed and put in a pen about eight feet high. Next morning Billy tired of being in confinement, leaped the walls of the enclosure and escaped, much to the disgust of the people of the village, who wished to keep him Phone 83 there.
