SASKATCHEWAN ELECTION BEING HELD TOMORROW.

Liberal campaigners, led by Premier J. G. Gardiner, stressed the development of the province under their regime; asserted their policies were based on sound common-sense, always with a view to the future; and contended that their administration had been free from corruption. Progressives condemned the party system of government; advocated what they termed a more representative arrangement. They demanded a closer check on the older parties, particularly in the matter of party funds.

Premier Gardiner, present leader of the Government, has been at the helm since early in 1926 when he was selected as successor to Hon. Charles A. Dunning, who went to Ottawa as minister of railways and canals. Besides his duties as head of the administration, Premier Gardiner also handles the department of education.

C. E. Little, nominal head of the Progressive section of thought, has not as yet served in the Legislature. He is president of the Provincial Progressive Association and secretary of the Saskatchewan School Trustees' Association.

With straight Liberal standard-bearers running in 60 seats, the Government party counts on the support of the sole Labor candidate, W. G. Baker, M.L.A., Moose Jaw, who has consistently backed their policies.

In the two far northern ridings, Ile a la Crosse and Cumberland, elections have been deferred. Special legislation governs the voting in these, due to difficulties of canoe travel and delay in spreading news in the sparsely settled areas.

The present standing of the Legislature is 52 Liberals and one Laborite Liberal supporter, 5 Progressives, 4 Conservatives and Independent. Since the last provincial election on June 2, 1925, twelve by-elections have been held of which the Government has won eleven.
