Sport

Local sport enthusiasts fail to realize just how valuable an asset is the recreation grounds on Acropolis Hill. However, a number of the fans who visited Anyox along with the baseball excursion are convinced of this fact. Up at the smelter town their baseball diamond is in very poor shape for playing, as there are skunk cabbagees growing very profusely around the outfield. It is not levelled off with sound ground as is the one here. The players were never just sure which way the ball was going to bounce after hitting the ground.

Dravis, the captain of the Prince Rupert baseball team, played a very fine game at Anyox on Sunday. Playing a new position as catcher he far excelled the other catchers which have held down the home plate during the last two or three games. Harry Day had something to pitch to when Dravis stood up behind the plate. He let very few balls get by and made one especially fine catch when a pop fly soared up above his head. He had to turn round and face the sun and run quite a distance to get under it, but he got there alright and held the ball too.

The young boys who accompanied the baseball team on the excursion to Anyox certainly profited by their visit. They saw a good performance of how baseball should be played and also were made to realize just how essential it was that every player should be in the pink of condition in order to do justice to himself and the team for which he played.

In Anyox down near the wharf there are two fine tennis courts. Players regularly make use of these and many good shots have been practised up. In order to stimulate a little sporting interest it is very probable that there will be a local tournament and that players will be invited here to represent Anyox in singles and doubles.

A very odd race was held at a recent picnic given by the merchants of Vancouver. It was a ladies' contest and the official title of the item was "jazz" race. Each contestant was given two pieces of cardboard and the lady had to go so far, taking every step on one of the pieces given. It was ludicrous to see a sprightly maiden trying to balance on one high heeled shoe while she placed another piece of cardboard in front of her in order to make the next step.

There can be nothing more amusing than a time race. Entries are taken and the contestants are lined up at the starting mark all ready to cover the required distance. Before the contest commences the judges decide upon a certain time which each person should try to take in covering the ground. Sometimes it is the person who crawls in at the last who is successful and at other times it is the one who can run the fastest. On one occasion it was a wee toddling girl who arrived at the tape as the winner. She had run her hardest while the others were wasting their time in thinking that the judges had decreed that it should take a long time to make the trip.
