Other organization preparatory to the race to Prince Rupert has also been completed. Ten boats are already enrolled in membership in the International Cruising Club, most of them being from Seattle.

Up to the end of last week, it was figured that fully half of the fleet of Prince Rupert halibut boats was still out on the banks. With the fishing season closing on Friday of next week, all these boats are expected to be in within the next two weeks as well as many American vessels with their final catches of the season. Rough weather and the fact that a number of the smaller boats have been tied up has accounted to a large extent for the lightness of landings during the bast two or three weeks. Many and heavier fares, however, are looked for during the next two weeks and there is no reason to believe why the satisfactory prices, which have prevailed for several weeks now, the season, halibut landings at should not continue. By November Prince Rupert during the past week 22, a week from next Friday, the last fares of the season should be landed and all boats accounted for.

Capt. Leon Sandver is having the ngine of his halibut boat P. Dorreen gone over by the Star Welding. The vessel is now tied up for the winter but the gadgits would be made shipshape before it is put away until next spring.
