SPITZBERGEN COAL DEPOSITS

Immense Quantities of Mineral of All Kinds on Island in Arctic Ocean.

GERMAN INTERESTS TAKEN BY BRITISH

Press despatches yesterday told of the discovery of an immense quantity of coal at Spitzbergen, the island which abounds in minerals of all kinds directly north of Norway within the polar circle.

The Scottish expedition referred to in the despatch was sent out by the Northern Exploration Company. At the last meeting of the company the chairman reported as follows: "We have now the most abundant evidence of the existence of this mineral, in such quantities and of such quality that if we had to rely on this product alone a great success is absolutely assured."

100,000 Tons in 1918. Considering that Great Britain's share of the world's reserve of coal is comparatively small, we do well to investigate the claims which are being made for Spitzbergen as a new and fruitful source of supply of coal and other minerals, on the possession of which the industrial life of the nation is completely dependent.

as dear and as scarce as it is in England it is somewhat exasperating to learn that in Spitzbergen—only four or five days' steaming by tramp steamer from British ports—coal of excellent quality, both bituminous and anthracite, exists in abundance, that much of it in fact is lying about on the surface, and that all of it can be easily worked and as easily shipped.

The 1918 Expedition.

"One of the results of the 1918 expedition was the extension of our properties by taking possession of the German territory, dismantling their wireless station, and hoisting the Union Jack on their flagstaff, and to fully confirm the conviction your board has always held to the enormous mineral richness of the island of Spitzbergen and in particular of the deposits found on the properties of this company. Now, ladies and gentlemen, before dealing with the future program of the company, I must say a word or two about the German influence in Norway, as I am firmly convinced it has been working very strongly against our company, both before the war and since, cold water having been thrown on our undertakings and interests in Spitzbergen, on several occasions at Tromsø, by Norwegians who endeavored to influence people going to Spitzbergen against our company, and did their best to infer that our company possessed nothing of any value.

Mineral Deposits.

"Having dealt very fully with the past history of the company, I now purpose telling you all about the wonderful mineral deposits, particularly coal and iron, in this company's territory in Spitzbergen. To say nothing of all our other minerals, you have in the coal and iron two most valuable assets not only for this company, but this country of ours and this Empire. We are officially informed by one of the largest shipping concerns that the Swedish company was financed by German banks for the purpose of making a railway to Norway from Gellivare. Twenty million tons of ore were sold to German blast furnaces at 13s 3d, and 13s (Continued on Page Five.)
