Crews Reduced In Pole Camps

Several of the pole camps along the Skeena River have reduced their staffs temporarily by onehalf. The roads are now in such condition that, if there was any heavy traffic, they would be ruined for winter and spring hauling. There will be no cutting in most of the camps until frost comes when full crews will again be employed. In the meantime, all the "During the three years before ALL-BRAN | poles now cut will be skidded out. The last of the railway ties on the 128-29 cut were loaded toward the end of November, the clean-up being effected at Decker Lake where one of the Hanson Timber & Lumber Co.'s largest camps is located. The work of inspection and loading is now at an end until a start is made on the new contracts about the middle of February when it is expected a smaller force will be employed owing to reduced orders.
