Flooding Worries People of Ootsa

Hans Klavervyden, who owns a large private lodge and home at Wistaria but resides in the winter at Beach Hotel, Victoria, is paying his first visit to Prince Rupert this week, arriving in town by car yesterday. He is an old friend of H. G. Perry.

Mr. Klavervyden, whose Dutch name means clover meadow in English, comes of an old family in Holland. He spent over 21 years in China and Manchuria before retiring to B.C. Being an experienced hunter, he has followed big game hunting in Northern China and Manchuria. It was the delightful hunting country combined with the magnificent scenery that induced him to build his "Manor House" at Wistaria on Ootsa Lake. His place is one of those that will be completely destroyed by the flooding of Ootsa Lake for the big power development of the Alcan Company.

Mr. Klavervyden, while glad to see the economic development of the country by Alcan, is very critical of the provincial government for not having provided in the agreement with Alcan for the purchase of the 72 places to be destroyed, before the water rights were handed over to the company. Great anxiety exists among the settlers whose places will be destroyed and who have had no compensation so far from the company.

DAINGEROUS GAS

Bedamp, the most common mine gas, is colorless, odorless and tasteless but causes suffocation owing to absence of oxygen.

Miss Faure's New Work

Exhibit of art enjoyed at Gathering last night.

Jeanne Faure's Art Exhibition in the Civic Centre opened last night when pupils and friends, at a social evening, were given a preview of her recent work.

The ladies' lounge, decorated with dahlias, chrysanthemums and gladioli, and hung on all sides with an unusually attractive collection of water colors, black and whites and oils, presented a pleasing sight.

An unusual flavor is given to the exhibition this year by the paintings of fruit trees done while Miss Faure visited the Okanagan this last spring. Although she had complained that the fruit trees were in "horribly" straight rows and too closely pruned to be artistic, she has overcome this difficulty and painted some very attractive pictures. Those of the prune blossoms, the peach and the flowering shrub were the favorites of the fruit trees.

But Miss Faure enjoys the natural untidy forest and is at her very best when painting in such places. Proof of this is in several very fine pictures, "Where Nature Listens," a forest scene out Wantage road; "Fairyland," a snow scene; "The Roadway," and "The Fine Forest," two paintings of spring sunlight and shadow in the Okanagan woods.

Of the water colors "The Hillside," a spot in McMillan Park was a favorite. Of the flower studies "The Rhododendron" is the most effective but a darker one of blue cornflowers by a poppy rug shows Miss Faure's unique Dutch ability to paint metals.

During the evening Mrs. Anfield sang several songs and Robert Jensen played violin selections, after which Miss Faure presented each artist, not with flowers, but with something more.
