Precedence Table For Visit of Princess

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's official table of precedence, which bears the King's approval, will be used in all federal functions for Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh during their October tour of the Dominion.

The table, which originated in the early days of the British monarchy, determines the order of presentation of officials and other high-ranking persons at royal and state functions. It was put into law in Britain about the 16th century.

In Canada, the table places the governor-general first—in the United Kingdom the sovereign has first rank—followed by the prime minister, the federal cabinet and the lieutenant-governors of the 10 provinces. Members of the church, the judiciary, the military and the state follow in an established order.

Curiously, though Ottawa is a national capital, the Canadian table gives no place to diplomatic representatives. However, by courtesy, they are placed behind the lieutenant-governors.

The provinces have their own tables of precedence. They are based on the federal table, but vary according to provincial customs. They will be used when the princess and the duke attend provincial functions.

Generally, the provincial tables place the lieutenant-governor first, followed by the premier and members of the provincial cabinet. From there on, the order closely follows that set out in the federal table.

There is no table of precedence for municipal ceremonies. However, officials here say that even the tiniest hamlet can adapt the official table to local use.

For example, the mayor or reeve would come first as the highest municipal official. The members of his council, in a sense his cabinet, would be next, followed by consul-general or other foreign representatives, local church dignitaries, military officials and so on.

Here is the official table:

LEIGH, England (CP)—The bookies took a beating when the favorite Atomic Energy won a donkey race here. Officials overruled objections of bookies who claimed the donkey had been spurred on by a spectator whipping it with a white cloth.

RICHMOND, England (CP)—A bullock ran wild in Richmond Park with its head jammed in a metal garage container. It was finally halted by a man who made a rodeo-style tackle.
