Something More People Want Has Been Added

Prince Rupert will be treated to a new type of service, long desired by many housewives. Wrapped sliced bread can now be obtained from Co-op Bakery, following installation of a new model Hayssen combination wrapper and slicer.

At a cost of more than $5000, Pat Forman, bakery manager, says the slicer has been installed "to give the people what they want." There will be no extra cost for the sliced bread he says. Two motors operate the machine, which is claimed to be the most modern "small bakery" unit on the market. Production speed is considered at 1,800 loaves an hour to be maximum. One man operation could handle 1,500 with ease, says Mr. Forman. Several innovations in the slicer, as set apart from earlier model machines, are pointed out by Mr. Forman. For example, the wrapper will not begin to operate unless a loaf of bread falls into correct position and (Continued on Page 5)
