Poppy Day Reflections

IN THESE DAYS of continuing conflict and uncertainty and even as Canadians are still giving their lives on the rugged fighting grounds of Korea...

It would be well too that we made the day, as we so rededicate ourselves, something more than a mere gesture or empty demonstration.

The Poppy is the symbol of remembrance and tomorrow is Remembrance Day. While we suggest that people live in their daily lives and actions the principles and precepts for which our men in the growing number of wars have fought and died, let us also wear a poppy for remembrance.

On Remembrance Day let us pause for a moment and think once again of the man or men we knew who left home and loved ones, the pleasures of peace and happy life, to take part in the conflicts and did not return.

In this spirit let us perform the simple act of remembrance—buy and wear a poppy, the emblem of sacrifice, the blood-red flower which reappears each year among the crosses now spread far beyond Flanders' Fields.

And as we pin upon ourselves these emblems, may we pray that man may yet learn to live in peace.

CENOTAPH SERVICE

As for the service of remembrance at the Cenotaph tomorrow, it would seem desirable to point out to the general public that that ceremony is not just a Legion obligation. It is true that the parade is a Legion one but the observance is, and should be, a citizens' tribute of remembrance to those who paid the supreme sacrifice in defence of their country and the rights of people to live our own free way of living.

This then is a challenge to the citizens. Are you grateful for the freedom that you enjoy? Will you show this by attending the Cenotaph service? There are minor inconveniences, unsupervised children, snarling dogs, inclement weather, perhaps. But the men and women whose memories we revere in such a ceremony underwent sufferings and torments beside which these pale into insignificance.

"At the going down of the sun, And in the morning, We will remember them."

Sir Arthur Currie's challenge is contained in another Legion saying: "They served till death. Why not we?"

Congratulations, Shirley!

CONGRATULATIONS to popular Shirley Haugan, Prince Rupert-born girl and member of a pioneer local family, on her selection for the famous Elgar Choir with the trip to Britain next year as its highlight.

It is particularly interesting that this is the second year a Prince Rupert girl has been selected.

Once more a local young person shows that this city has talent and the ability to develop it. And it is all good publicity for the city.

As I See It

Blast From Britain

WINNIPEG—The speech from the throne in Britain is confirmation of what I reported during the election campaign there, both through this newspaper and by radio:

Nobody in the two big parties told the people the cold-blooded truth during the speaking campaign. But now that the votes are counted reality breaks through.

Mr. Churchill says flatly that "Britain is on the road to national bankruptcy." He warns that only the most drastic measures will halt the move toward disaster.

The point is—everybody in high places knew this DURING the election. But neither Mr. Attlee, Mr. Churchill, nor even the bad boy of British politics, Nye Bevan, then said it. Each had a different reason for "laying off."

Only one prominent candidate said DURING the election campaign what Mr. Churchill says now. She was Lady Violet Bonham Carter—daughter of late Liberal Prime Minister Asquith.

THOSE who heard the two CBC radio broadcasts from Britain entitled "Press Conference" may remember how some of us tried to get the old Chancellor of the Exchequer—and also the new one—to talk reality.

Six of us first interviewed the Rt. Hon. Hugh Gaitskell and then a week later, the Rt. Hon. R. A. Butler. We did not know at that time that Mr. Butler would be the new holder of Britain's purse strings. Looking back over the scripts of those unrehearsed free-for-all talks I see here the following:

PHILPOTT: Well, Mr. Butler, all this is very pleasant and educative but as I have gone all over this country in the election campaign I have the impression that both parties are completely unrealistic in their discussion of the real issues. The Conservatives say very clearly they are going to have a bigger and better armament program and also they are going to have 300,000 houses per year instead of the 200,000 houses, and yet when I look up the figures in the labor exchanges I see that Britain is already half a million workers short to fill the jobs there now are.

BUTLER: Well, the labor force, or the equivalent to the labor force before the war, are now producing 26 per cent less. If we could improve that we could do a great deal more with the force we have.

Mr. Gaitskell was somewhat more frank in answer to this same question. He said:

"Well, it's quite obvious that if we are to carry out this defence program the output of some consumer goods has got to go down—I've always said that, we made it perfectly plain from the start. It'll have to go down. I don't myself think it need affect the housing program which as you

Reflects and Reminisces

Juneau is about to have a postal delivery system and right thankful do the citizens feel about it. Juneau is not nearly as large as Prince Rupert. Yet here in Prince Rupert, for forty years a transcontinental terminus, one of Canada's main deep sea fishing centres, and rapidly expanding because of new and far reaching industrial growth, but with everyone still clinging to the post office to stand in line at the wicket or see what's in the box.

A KINDLY VISITOR

Friday, November 9, was a day of singular beauty. Sky was cloudless and atmosphere pleasant. But nothing like that could be said of Thursday, Wednesday, Tuesday and Monday. But it's just as well to remember that on Thursday the Minister of Education proclaimed a holiday.

HOW COME?

As a rule, when someone loses his cash savings it makes a newspaper story or he tells about what is to him, a personal disaster. And one cannot but notice the similarity in the size of the sums lost. Usually, it's handy to a thousand bucks, or possibly thirteen or fourteen hundred. Having accumulated that much—which the Lord knows is little enough—how did he ever come to drop the lot? If he did really lose it?

STILL CURIOUS

"Is Prince Rupert anywhere near Alaska?" asks somebody back east or down south. "Ketchikan nearest town. About eighty miles." "Good Lord, You must be freezing. Why stay?" It's been like that since incorporation, despite miles of publicity and personal letters of contradiction. So possibly it's worth mentioning that within the past few weeks 88 individuals down south and back east have frozen, partly frozen and contracted serious illness through sudden weather changes.

Use of the expression "Dominion" in the House of Commons may become less, if the government continues to have its way. There are no visible signs of the British Empire or American Republic disappearing.

Skagway wants to be the White Horse highway terminal. So does Juneau. And Skagway, after so many years of peace and drowsiness, is again showing vim and push and almost a streak of the stampee. A road will be a major job, if it is to be handy to the trail of '98.

WELL BEHAVED NOW

LONDON—Boys on probation after court appearances for a variety of offences joined a Sunday School camp and the party won a prize for good conduct. Their former records were unknown to fellow campers.

know is about 200,000 a year. But I don't think it's possible in present circumstances to carry on the defence program and also to increase the amount of houses built as the Tories are claiming."

NOW that the election is over everybody is talking in terms of reality—and nobody pretending that any nation can have it both ways.

Remembrance Day Service

Tomorrow morning the annual Remembrance Day parade to the cenotaph will take place and, as usual, the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League with the Ladies' Auxiliary is in charge. So as not to conflict with the regular Sunday church services the time of the parade has been changed so that the two minutes of silence, which usually is observed at the start of the cenotaph service, will conclude the ceremony, and churchgoers will be able to reach their respective churches in time for their regular service which will start at 11:15.

Warrant for Sea Cadets

Prince Rupert's Captain Cook Sea Cadet unit Thursday received its official "warrant" under which to operate in a brief ceremony performed by Sea Cadets Area Officer Lt. Cdr. Derek M. Tye (RCN).

S. P. Woodside, president of the Navy League of Canada branch here, received the warrant from Lt. Cdr. Tye in the presence of Commanding Officer Sea Cadets Arthur Ogilvie and two sections of Sea Cadets, who fell in at the Navy Drill Hall.

Lt. Cdr. Tye told cadets that their uniforms had been ordered and that it was likely they would be received "in a month's time—maybe six weeks."

Captain Cook corps, a corvette unit with a complement of 50 cadets, brings to 800 the number of cadets in British Columbia, said Lt. Cdr. Tye. Next summer Comox would be opened up as a camp for cadets which would give summer training to junior and intermediate cadets west of Winnipeg.

The area officer of Pacific Area left Friday by plane for headquarters at HMCS Discovery. "We expect about 1,000 lads,"

Saturday Sermon Sheep Or Men?

The Bible often compares men with the animal creation and most frequent of all is the comparison of the nation of Israel and the Church of God with a flock of sheep. In once place, however, the difference is most explicitly pointed out, where Ezekiel says: "And yet my flock, the sheep of my pasture, are men. And I am your God, saith the Lord God."

There is a most profound tendency in our society to treat not only the children and the unfit, but also able bodied men and women as domesticated animals. All the social devices to take the risks and venture out of living... insurances and social securities and the governmental regulation of life... might well be classed under this head. I am not attacking these things. Many of them come into being through the application of Christian teaching. It is a good thing if men will in some ways regard

As for the Captain Cook corps, he felt there was a "great future" and reminded cadets of past performances of the corps. They would be well equipped and would have the full support of the Navy, and it was the intention to provide this unit with a specially-designed whaler for cadets.

Across Canada, 6000 cadets are active in 82 corps and from this said Lt. Cdr. Tye. Next summer the permanent force RCN in the first quarter of 1951, Lt. Cdr. Tye said.

And there is little doubt but that every man knows in his heart that he is living at the truly human level when he is charged with great responsibility. Thus, the truer picture of living at the human level is more apparent in the fisherman risking his life for his living or the soldier going out, never knowing if he will return. The Cross which Christ calls us to carry is surely that of dread adventure undertaken in the spirit of love.
