Women Entering Public Affairs

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. Cleely Sampson, recently-elected vice-president of the Progressive Conservative Women's Organization for the Montreal district, thinks women are becoming more and more aware of their responsibilities in public affairs.

Mrs. Sampson, a lawyer, who recently became the first woman to plead a case in the Supreme Court of Canada, said in an interview, women's growing attempts to have their viewpoints heard will lead many of them into politics.

This is as it should be, she says, because "women are just as responsible for the state of the world as men. After all, government is only housekeeping on a larger scale."

Law and politics are not Mrs. Sampson's only interests. She has worked on possible prison reforms and feels that jails should be operated like federal penitentiaries where prisoners are put to work learning trades and producing things.

For relaxation, she runs a 100-acre farm in Brome County where she spends every available week-end growing vegetables and apples.
