DAILY EDITION.

Wednesday, Sept. 10, 1919.

One of the Rules of Constitutional Government.

No one would make a louder protest if the Prince of Wales was to interfere in regard to Canada's internal affairs than those same persons who are asking his help to have some military defaulters set at liberty. We are not now discussing whether they ought to be set free or not. What we object to is trying to use unconstitutional means to have them liberated. The Prince of Wales has nothing whatever to do with our affairs. We are glad to see him because he will very likely be king some day, but just at present he has no standing except from a social point of view. Even the King has nothing to do with us except only as he is advised by his ministers.

With a constitutional government, such as we have, the ruling power can do no wrong, because it acts only on the advice of its ministers. If the king does wrong it is because he is badly advised, and the ministers are responsible. The King does not resign if the people lose confidence. It is his advisers. That is why the king or his representative is not a free agent.

It is most probable that the present visit of the Prince of Wales has been arranged on the advice of David Lloyd George, and that his general course of action is mapped out for him. He cannot take up any public question such as has been suggested by some labor and other interests without being advised by the ministers in England who are the real power behind the throne.

MacKenzie Does Not Represent Liberals.

It seems a pity that the duty of an opposition in parliament seems to be always to oppose. When D. D. MacKenzie opposed the signing of the Peace Treaty we do not think he expressed the views of the people of Canada, nor of the Liberal party.

We are all anxious to see the treaty signed. Think of Canada standing out from the rest of the Empire and refusing to join the final treaty. The Liberal convention certainly did a wise thing recently in deciding that Mr. MacKenzie was not a proper man to act as its leader and spokesman.

Making Provision For the Visitors.

The fair directors are to be congratulated on the vigorous measures they are adopting to prepare for the housing of the visitors to the forthcoming fair. Last year this end of the work was overlooked with results that were not a credit to the city. This year everything is to be changed and the visitors will get some accommodation. It may not be quite of the parlor car variety, but it will be the best possible under the circumstances.

Salvation for Working Class.

In connection with the story "Mufti," mention of which was made yesterday, the writer introduces a Socialist agitator and this is what he makes him say:

"You see, Captain Vane, we approach this matter from a fundamentally different point of view. You look around you, and you see men striking here and striking there. And you say 'Look at the swine; striking again!' But there's one thing that you fail to grasp, I think. Underneath all these strikes and violent upheavals, bursting into flame in all sorts of unexpected places—there is the volcano of a vital conflict between two fundamental ideas. Though the men hardly realize it themselves, its there, that conflict all the time. And we who see a little further than the mob know that its there and that, sooner or later that conflict will end in victory for one side or the other. Which side, my friend? Yours or ours, or both, yours and ours?"

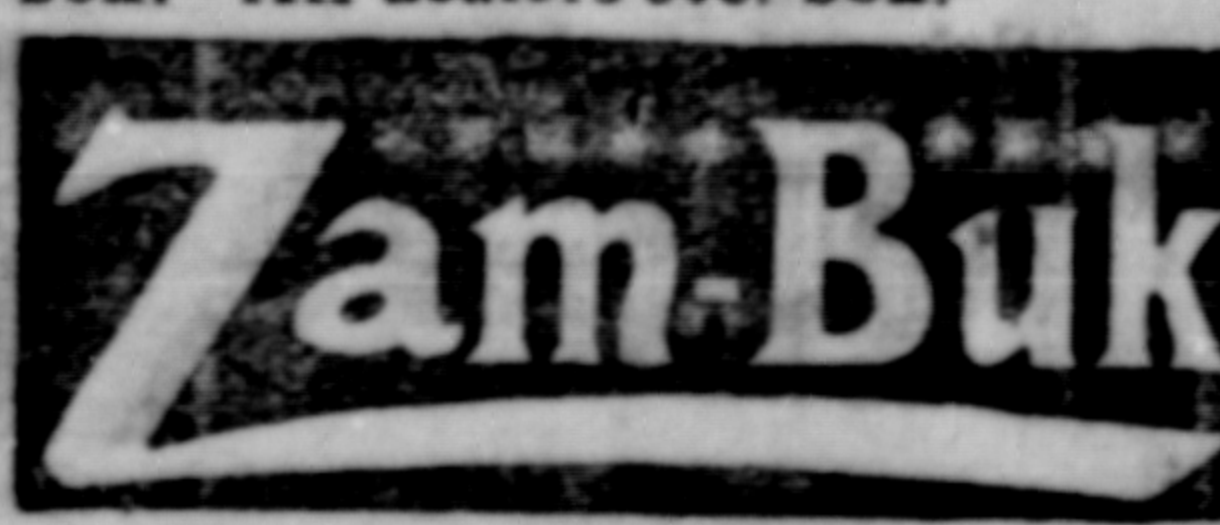

"To the master class generally there is a certain order of things and they can imagine nothing else. They employ workers—they pay them or they 'chuck' them, as they like. They hold over them absolute power. They are the masters and the others are the men. That is the only form of society they can conceive of. Any mitigation of conditions is simply a change within the old order."

After a good deal of discussion comes this final query from the Captain: "And you really think that by exchanging private ownership for a soulless bureaucracy you find salvation? You're rather optimistic aren't you on the subject of government departments?"

For your children's injuries nothing is equal to Zam-Buk—it ends pain so quickly! Children know this and when they have once heard it applied will cry for it again. Mrs. T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society, Belleville, Ont., says: "We never use anything but Zam-Buk for our children's cuts, burns, bruises, etc. We have found it superior to all other remedies for ending pain and healing, and we have also found, by experience, that an injury treated with Zam-Buk never festers. With so many children in our shelter, we really could not afford to be without Zam-Buk, not only for their injuries, but also for their sores and skin troubles."

Mothers! Be sure to keep a box of Zam-Buk on the medicine shelf. It will save you much needless anxiety as well as expense. Zam-Buk does not deteriorate with keeping, but retains its strength and purity to the very last. For eczema, ringworm, boils, pimples, ulcers and piles, Zam-Buk is equally good. If you have not already tried this herbal balm, cut out this advertisement, write across it the name of this paper and send it with 1c. stamp (to pay return postage) to Zam-Buk Co., Dupont St., Toronto. We will then send you a free trial box. All dealers 50c. box.
