"In my opinion, no other medicine is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as 'Fruit-a-tives'."

I was induced to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and now for six months I have been entirely well". A. ROSENBERG.
Box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

DRIFTING IN NORTHERN SEA

Road Amundsen in Ice-Locked Schooner in Far Arctic Ocean.

Bound for the North Pole Road Amundsen, Norwegian discoverer of the South Pole, is at present drifting in his ice-locked schooner, the Maud, somewhere north of western Siberia, according to beliefs held by the Seattle Norwegian vice-consulate and Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Canadian Arctic explorer.

In planning the trip, the explorer said he expected, after reaching the pole, to return either to Grant Land, west of Greenland or Melville Island, which lies in the Arctic Ocean north of Canada. Should he reach Melville Island he probably would journey by sea to Nome, Alaska, or overland to Dawson, Yukon Territory.

Two aeroplanes, it is believed, formed part of the Maud's equipment when she left Norway last fall and sailed through the White Sea bound for the icy north. The final dash to the pole may be made in one of the planes. Amundsen, it is believed, may also fly back to civilization in one of the machines.

Nothing has been heard from Amundsen since September 1, 1918, nearly one year ago. At that time the Maud was reported taking oil for her motors at Dixon Island, a White Sea point. After taking the oil she sailed northeast into the rapidly freezing waters of the Arctic Ocean.

From White Sea Amundsen expected to drift east with the ice to the new Siberian Islands, which lie in the Arctic off Siberia. At the new Siberian Islands, it was believed, the drift would carry the boat toward, if not across the pole. Amundsen intended to use the aeroplanes if he found the drift would not carry him across the "top of the earth."
