Canadian Women Progress in Public Life—Four Are Mayors

By KAY REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's capital had its first woman mayor in 1951 and the year also saw housewives from coast to coast dig in for a thrift war against high prices.

The lighter side—Marjory Kelly, 23-year-old tobacco dealer's daughter of Courland, was named Miss Canada of 1951; a couple of prominent women were blamed for the high prices in the country's food life.

Evelyn Tufts, Halifax resident in the parliamentary gallery at Ottawa, said the late Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and the late Viscount Bennett were responsible for the high prices.

Never had a chance to be acquainted with women and didn't appreciate them," she said while visiting in California. "But we may do a lot better now on."

Months later, in October, prediction appeared to be true. Mayor Grenville of Ottawa died and his daughter Charlotte Whitton took office, the first woman in the city's history. By the end of the year she was the same time light with others, all from Ontario.

Marjorie Hamilton was elected mayor of Barrie, and Bernadette Smith became the first woman mayor of Woodville. Grace Burk McFarlane was elected first woman of Leamington.

Complete the picture—Mrs. Haldane, the perennial ringer for the Teck township, includes Kirkland Lake, elected for yet another year.

Locally Born Pair Married

A couple, both of whom were born in Prince Rupert and have spent all their lives here, were united in marriage at St. Paul's Lutheran Church on the evening of December 8, when Miss Irene Kildal became the bride of James Flaten.

Rev. H. O. Olsen officiated before an altar which was banked with baskets of flowers.

Given in marriage by Martin Berg, the bride wore a beautiful wedding costume of white duchesse satin with train. With sweetheart neckline, the gown featured a bouffant skirt with lace trim. Her bouquet was of red roses.

Mrs. Robert Currie was the matron of honor, wearing rose net. Bridesmaids were Miss Lillian Sylvester and Miss Yvonne Kildal, the former in green net and the latter in lavender net, both carrying bouquets of baby chrysanthemums. Little Jessie Seymour, niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing floor length satin and carrying a nosegay of chrysanthemums.

The groomsmen were Ole Skog. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Nora Thompson sang "Through the Years."

Acting as ushers were Rupert Holkestad, Robert Currie and Alfred Dean.

RECEPTION
Following the church rite, a reception was held at the Oddfellows' Hall where many friends gathered to toast the happy couple and celebrate the occasion.

A three-tier wedding cake, centering a handsomely covered bride's table which was adorned with silver candlesticks, was duly cut by bride and groom.

The couple received congratulations under an arch of roses which was centered with white bells and flanked by baskets of chrysanthemums.

Bernhof Pederson proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom responded and Ole Skog offered a toast to the matron-of-honor.

Delicious refreshments were served with Ann Stromdal, Millie Bill, Joyce Strand, Verna Stevens, Pat Guyan and Margaret Giske acting as servers. The bride's mother, Mrs. Martin Berg, wore brown and gold taffeta with accessories to match. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Taylor, wore grey crepe with rose accessories.

Fred Hogan read telegrams of congratulations from Ketchikan, Norway, Vancouver and Saskatchewan.

Many beautiful gifts were on display and indicated the esteem and popularity in which the bride and groom are held.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful string of pearls with earrings to match.

The evening's proceedings concluded with dancing for which music was provided by Mrs. Nora Thompson and Jake Antone.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included the bride's uncle, Nils Hansen, from Seattle, and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Jensen, Andrew Antonson and A. Hofseth.

Mr. and Mrs. Flaten will reside at 806 Borden Street after the New Year.

The bride is employed by the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-operative. The groom is a truck operator and is one of Prince Rupert's star basketball players.
