"Gee, but they are certainly making a good job there," was the comment of a passenger of the steamer Prince Rupert as he watched the repair job being done on the ship. And his fellow passengers agreed.

They were at the repair wharf at the drydock and they were watching the men working on the ship. It seemed strange to them to see cement being mixed and poured as part of the job. They could understand the welding or rivetting but concrete seemed to them to be reserved for house building. The patches were being put on and reinforced. The caulkers were busy. There was nothing being left to chance, for inspection by the various officials would not overlook any weakness. And the passengers were in agreement that with a job so well done they would sleep in peace as they continued their interrupted voyage.

The other subject of discussion was fog. That is the bane of the sailor as it is of the airman. In spite of fog horns blowing, and modern radar in use, in spite of every human endeavour to avoid any accident, the collision occurred that they had been lucky. "And what about the sailors in the forecastle of the Princess Kathleen?"

Their escape was nothing short of a miracle. Many were the experiences of sailors as they talked. How often in other waters the fog had been a source of worry to them. One told how on an oil tanker he had watched another ship loom up and there seemed to be no way to avoid the collision, but they had slipped past, with a little, but enough clearance.

MORE FOG

Boatmen in the harbor could recall how easy it was within the confined waters of the harbor to get off course and to row, and row, and then find themselves off course. One experienced boatman said that leaving a rope trailing astern was a good way to see that the boat was keeping on a direct course. But fog always is a danger.

A considerable quantity of black cod was landed during the week. The Eclipse had 21,500 pounds and the Miss Jean 23,000. Prices were 15.60 and 8.5; halibut to the amount of 3,500 was sold at 26.20 and 17 cents. The Parma also landed 28,000 pounds of black cod at 15.50 and 8 cents and 1,000 red cod at 5 cents. Four thousand pounds of halibut sold at 23.21 and 18.

Seine boats report that fishing in Ogden Channel is fair. Gill netters in Kitkatla Inlet report an average of 125 pinkies. There are few cohoes.

Waterfront habitues were surmising that the arrival of CPS Princess Joan would be its first visit to Prince Rupert waters. With the Princess Norah south bound from Alaska and the Prin-

RAY REFLECTS

As Labor Day approaches, this vast and disturbing fact remains. All kinds of toil, skilled and otherwise, are essential. But over and above all else is the tacit admission of a third world war being a possibility. There may be no war whatever. It is the prayer of the nations that this be so. And if peace stays unbroken, much of what has already been made, could doubtless be found useful. But how infinitely better, instead of contributing to more battlefield cemeteries, there is something else in their stead.

BABY, IT'S COLD OUTSIDE!

There were about three hundred aboard the Princess Kathleen and they came ashore unexpectedly at Prince Rupert. But they did not have to stay ashore overnight. That experience could have been all right for fresh air, but in other ways had its disadvantages.

Rental of fifty housing units in Prince Rupert is assured, the city giving this guarantee to the Federal government. Enthusiasm has not slackened a bit. Even $60 rental can be paid. Well, no one need be uncertain any longer. And the need exists just as much as ever.

LUKEWARM

The name of Addis Aababa was in the headlines yesterday. The news was dull. It was tepid. Some might say lukewarm. But that's also true of the ancient city in the mountains of Abyssinia, which would appear to be as lifeless as Mussolini. And that's pretty dead.

CRIMINALS

Bomb raids have been made on rail and power lines in British Columbia by radical Sons of Freedom. In other, and less pretentious language, a bunch of criminals have prospects of being handed more police attention.

The ship back on its run at the earliest possible moment. The delayed passengers were appreciative of this effort.

A repair job of a different kind is being done on the Takla. It is almost incredible that the pounding of the hull on the rocks could have reduced the hull timbers almost to pulp. That is, on the starboard side; the port side is even worse. Yet when repaired, she will be a serviceable boat and make many more trips to and from the fishing grounds.

Areas remaining open for seine fishing are Queen Charlotte Islands, Pearce and Portland Canal, Seaforth Channel, northern portion of Melhusen Channel, Fisher Channel and Rivers and Smith Inlet. All other seine areas are closed for conservation purposes.

Union steamer Chilcotin, Capt. E. E. McLean, was in port Saturday in course of a cruise to Sitka with a Knights Templar party on board.

Screen News

"The Blue Lagoon" (an Individual Picture) now at the Totem Theatre, is based on the famous best seller novel by H. de Vere Stacpoole that so shocked the Edwardian World. In rich and glowing Technicolor, this film can best be described in Director Frank Launder's own words, "a simple, sentimental and beautiful romance for which people, sated with sophistication and cynicism, will be ready." The picture tells the story of two children who are shipwrecked on a desert South Sea Island. They grow up together, encounter two unscrupulous traders who put in to the island, and eventually fall in love with each other. Their baby son is born during a violent hurricane. Only then, with a new life to consider, do they decide to set sail in their small dinghy in search of the civilized world beyond the reef. Jean Simmons plays the part of the beautiful girl castaway, the boy is played by a new star, ex-Bevin boy Donald Houston. A major part of this lovely romantic picture was actually shot in the faraway Fiji Islands.
