Weather Man Goes Slightly Awry.

The weather man seems to have made a mistake or else he is punishing the fair directors for their sins. At any rate the fair this year has been to a large extent spoiled by the blustering weather, when up to the eve of the great event there had been nothing but ideal days following each other with almost unceasing regularity.

As no one here seems to have sufficient pull at Ottawa or Victoria to prevent calamities of this kind we must just make the best of it and smile again. Perhaps it might be wise to try to arrange a week earlier another season, but then the fishing might be late and it would never do to take the people away from the canneries until the season has closed. Prince Rupert is simply undergoing a similar experience to that which other cities have often been through.

Famous Novelist Writes About Men.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, the famous novelist, in an article in the American Magazine has some very interesting things to say about men. She says that they are all just grown up boys and even when old are simply old boys.

In another place she likens men to cats. She says: "Just run over the cat's predominant characteristics and check them off: The cat is a night wanderer. The cat loves familiar places and the hearth side. (And oddly enough the cat's love of the hearthside doesn't interfere with his night wanderings). The cat can hide under the suavest exterior in the world principles that would make a kitten blush, if it had any place for a blush. The cat is greedy to helpless things. And heavens, how the cat likes to be petted and generally approved. It likes love, but not all the time. And it likes to choose the people it consorts with. It is a predatory creature and likes to be neat and tidy."

Mrs. Rinehart says that men are always loyal to each other. To quote again: "This I maintain is the sole reason for alluding to them as the stronger and superior sex. They are stronger. They are superior. They are as strong as a trades union only more so. They stand together against the rest of the world. Women do not. They have no impulse toward solidarity. They fight a sort of guerilla warfare, each sniping from behind her own tree. They are the greatest example of the weakness of unorganized force in the world."

Mrs. Rinehart is on the whole appreciative of men although she points out many of their foibles. She says: "A house without a man in it is as nice and tidy and peaceful and attractive and cheerful as a grave in a cemetery. It is as pleasant as Mark Twain's celebrated combination of rheumatism and St. Vitus's dance and as empty as a penny-in-the-slot chocolate machine in a railway station."

Difficult Work Stopping the War.

Stopping the war seems about as difficult as stopping a comet, once you get it nicely going through space. It has to wear itself out before it stops its mad career. Fighting still goes on in Russia, in Poland, in Fiume and in other parts of Europe. The war is not yet at an end even though the peace has been signed by a good many of the nations concerned in the big fight. The great thing will be to prevent it starting again.

"The Influenza Epidemic"

From Oct., 1918, to May 1919, the Dominion Accident and Sickness Co. paid $58,907.47 in claims resulting from Influenza, Pleurisy and Pneumonia.

These figures should carry conviction.
