Again today the ladies emerged triumphant, as the better sports writers say. Miss Lucy Brash, one of the world's luckier women, battered her way into a game contract as shaky as a politician's promise--and then made it by means of a well-considered backward finesse.

West dealer East-West vulnerable (Mrs. Keen)

D-865 Pass

Mr. Abel won the first two Miss Brash trumped in dummy couver Monday. with the eight of spades.

She drew the opponent's hearts? A "normal" finesse, Steamer Passage, Range 5 Coast Land leading low to the ace and back toward the king-jack, would win moval of timber if Mr. Meek had the queen.

But Miss Brash didn't go for that play-not yet anyway. First she wisely did a little mental checking on Mr. Abel's first hand vulnerable opening bid. Clearly he had little enough. Could he have opened without the queen of hearts? Yes, it was barely possible. But on the bidding, Miss Brash figured that any honor card was much more i likely to be in Mr. Abel's hand than in Mr. Meek's.

On this reasoning she placed the heart queen on her left and that meant the "normal" heart finesse would lose. All right, then, what about an abnormal finesse? That's right down Miss Brash's alley. Nobody could call her a routine player.

Mr. Abel probably had the queen of hearts but he didn't have to hold the 10, too. So at the sixth trick Miss Brash led the jack of hearts, determined to let it go if it wasn't covered. Mr. Abel covered with the queen and dummy's ace won.

Now the trey of hearts was led back, Mr. Meek played the four and Miss Brash put in the nine, which was a winner. She conceded a club trick at the end, making four spades on the nose.
