Victoria Papers Make History

VICTORIA (CP) — An event unique in Canadian newspaper history took place here when the Victoria Daily Times, the afternoon paper, and the Daily Colonist, the city's morning paper, moved into a new, single $1,000,000 plant, known as Victoria Press Ltd.

The big push started when tons of machinery was moved from the two downtown plants to the new building at the north end of the city. Workmen had already erected scaffolding and knocked holes in the upper-storey walls of the old buildings to facilitate removal of Linotypes and other printing machinery.

The move was completed without a break in publication. Clarence Wallace, Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, pressed a button to start the new press rolling. The press can produce 40,000 newspapers an hour.

The papers have separate editorial offices in each wing of the building but will use the same press, composing room, stereotype, wirephoto machine and library. Each paper will also have its own Canadian Press teletype service.

Use of This Port Sought

Suggestion of the Prince George Board of Trade is that if wheat shipping could be developed through the Prince Rupert elevator, loaded railway box-cars would come to this railway line and then be available for use in shipping lumber thus obviating periodical shortage of rail cars which has been working hardship on interior mills. The Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night turned over the matter to the grain and Peace River committees. The Prince George Board of Trade requested that the local chamber give it a true picture of the present elevator situation here.

Prince George has been interesting itself considerably of late in the possibility of better utilization of the port of Prince Rupert as being essential to the economic welfare of the whole interior country. George Murray, MP for Skeena has also been advocating considerably along the same line.

Cancer Clinic Doing Well

REGINA (CP) — A small auburn-haired widow with sympathetic grey-green eyes is looked upon as a combination fairy godmother and helpful friend by thousands of cancer patients in Regina.

She is Anne J. Ellis, welfare worker employed by the Saskatchewan division of the Canadian Cancer Society.

At her desk in the Allan Blair Memorial Cancer Clinic, Mrs. Ellis says she is mostly concerned with "review" patients. These she visits twice weekly.

During a five-month period this had added up to 6,200 patients visited, including general hospital, nursing home and out-patients.

Her job is manifold. She writes letters for patients, attends to their personal shopping and brings them magazines. Occasionally she takes patients to meet trains.

HELPS NEWCOMERS

Often people of foreign extraction unable to speak or write English to any extent must stay over in Regina for treatment. The difficulty of getting word to their families, often the cause of much anxiety, is solved by Mrs. Ellis who writes or telephones for them.

In addition, Mrs. Ellis supplies small comforts for patients who have very little means. Money for this purpose is supplied by the Yorkton, Swift Current, Moose Jaw and Regina units of the society.

Christmas is an exceptionally busy time for this busy little woman who sees to it that none of her patients is forgotten.

An important service Mrs. Ellis performs is to find suitable accommodation near the clinic. She endeavors to find a sympathetic environment for each patient seeking a temporary residence. She keeps a file of these accommodations and says:

"I've had to knock at doors but I usually find what I'm looking for"

Cancer patients are remarkably cheerful and most appreciative, Mrs. Ellis says, adding of her own role: "The work grows on you"

LONDON (CP) — Hundreds of copies of a 1,000-page advance catalogue of the British Industries Fair, weighing two pounds and printed in eight languages, have been sent to 63 countries.

Exciting Welles Picture Showing

Glamorous adventure in distant lands is seen in the technicolor production of "The Black Rose," featuring Tyrone Power, Orson Welles and Cecile Aubry, which comes to the screen of the Totem Theatre here this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The picture spans three continents, ranging from castles in India and across the world to Africa and Asia in pursuit of adventure of the Thirteenth Century type.

Power and his companion, Jack Lawkins, challenge and impress the great Oriental general, Bayan, played by Orson Welles, and serve the beautiful lady, known as "Black Rose," who crosses the path of their pursuits.

Cecile Aubry, from the English screen, makes her American debut as "Black Rose."

Memorable and exciting sequences include a death-defying and tortuous rope walk, crucial tests of archery, desert travel by racing camels, treacherous knife games.

It is a typical Welles picture replete with excitement and mystery.

Earthquake Death Toll Now 1200

SAN SALVADOR (CP) — Death toll from El Salvador's weekend earthquake rose today to 1200 persons as new reports filtered into the capital from isolated regions. The injured are reckoned at 4000 or more.

ENDERBY, B.C. (CP) — St. George's Anglican Church here has just celebrated its 60th anniversary. It is the oldest remaining on its original site in the Okanagan. The oldest was the Anglican Church at Lansdowne, which was moved to Armstrong.

Death List of Six Confirmed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Royal Canadian Mounted Police have confirmed that six men were drowned when a 14-foot boat capsized in Tahsis Canal on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The bodies of three victims have been recovered — Gurbax Singh, an East Indian, and John Ambrose and Andy Jackson, two Indians.

Three others are still missing. Original report indicated that a sixth man may have been in the boat but this could not be confirmed.

The tragedy was discovered Sunday when an aircraft sighted an overturned boat floating in the canal.
