Blackwood on Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

Still trying to beat the experts with his count bidding method, Mr. New added up his points. Four points for each of his aces, two for each of his queens and one for each doubleton. Fourteen points in all and a compulsory opening bid.

After Mr. Champion over-called with one diamond, Mr. Muzzy put on quite a show. He laid his cards on the table and started fingering his abacus again. Presently a look of disbelief came over his face.
He picked his cards up and gave them another look. Then he put them down and carefully studied his abacus. He was becoming more and more perplexed.
Here is what had happened. Mr. Muzzy's hand added to 10 points: five for his high cards and five for his void in diamonds. This made a total of 23, counting the 13 points guaranteed by partner's opening bid.
But Mr. Muzzy had got messed up on his abacus. On the second ure, where each bead represented 10, he had pushed two beads across instead of one. Thus the abacus showed the total count in both hands was 33—THE SLAM ZONE!

The hand didn't look like a slam—even to Mr. Muzzy. But who was he to question the system—his own system? Finally he stopped worrying. "Six clubs," he said loudly—and his kibitzers nearly fell off their chairs.
Mr. Champion doubled out of sheer anger, and Mr. Muzzy stuck to his guns with a redoubled.

Mr. Champion led the king of diamonds. When the dummy went down he screamed like the victim in a horror movie. "You bid SIX," he snarled, "on that unholy mess of rubble!"
Mr. Muzzy merely looked smug while Mr. New rolled in 12 tricks with the greatest of ease, when everything broke just right.
Mr. Muzzy was in his glory. "In no other system," he stated, "could this slam be reached."
"Let me see that infernal abacus, Muzzy," demanded Mr. Champion. He examined it and soon Mr. Muzzy's error came to light.

Champion held his head in his hands. "Gad, think of it!" he muttered. "Flummoxed by a young beak!"
Miss Brash was rearing with laughter. "Why don't you admit this point-count bidding is great stuff, Mr. Champion?" she kidded. "I'd take it up myself. The only trouble is—I don't have an abacus!"

Puck Champs Speed Home

WINNIPEG, Man.—With the cheers of the Winnipeg Hockey fans still ringing in their ears, and in proud possession of the Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the Junior Hockey Championship of Canada, the Barrie Flyers left here last evening over Canadian National lines for Toronto where they will arrive Friday morning.

Under the coaching of "Har" Emms, the brilliant junior lads from Barrie won their championship in four straight games from the inniege Monarchs, western champions. Following the final game, coach Emms let it be known that he is finished with hockey and will return to his own business in the future.

Owen Sound Cup Winner

OWEN SOUND—Owen Sound Mercurys won the Allan Cup last night.
In a thrilling seventh game Mercurys defeated Fort Frances Canadians 3 to 1.
It was a sizzling third period finish that brought this Georgian Bay city its first Allan Cup championship in history.

The struggle was the most thrilling in the entire seven-game series with both clubs fighting every inch of the way.
Pat McReavey broke a two-period scoreless draw when he beat Goalie Barefoot at 3:26 Burlington and Bukachieski put the Sounders three up before Elzensohl tallied the lone marker for the Canadians, with six minutes of the game remaining.

MORE PRISONERS
VANCOUVER (CP)—Bishop A. H. Sovereign, founder of the John Howard Society in Vancouver, told a meeting here that "every time a man goes to jail society admits a failure."
He noted that more people are going to jail now than ever before with the prison population 4740 in 1950.
