Finds Wartime Camaraderie Still Prevails in Old Land

Friendliness and consideration one for the other which people of the Cld Country developed under the stress and sufferings of the war are qualities which have projected themselves into the post-war period and are undoubtedly contributory factors toward the fortitude and understanding with which the people bear shortages and restrictions; which no other nation in the ulating on its possibilities for Colonel Haughton, who has world might tolerate.

"Pitiful" is the way Mr. Nicoll describes the war casualties among the civilian population which are still so evident in the Old Country. They seem particularly numerous among the young people due to the bombings by the Luftwaffe.

Mr. Nicholl's visit was confined largely to the centre of sea level. Scotland but he saw again many of the old historic points including Edinburgh Castle, Holyrood Castle, Linlithgow Palace and Stirling Castle.

As if for diversion, many people in Scotland seemed to be more interested for the time in the fate of the Stone of Scone (removed from Westminster Abbey at Christmas and found a few days ago at Arbroath Abbey in Scotland) than in war and rumors of war and economic conditions.

An amusing incident occurred in Glasgow. The Lord Provost of Glasgow had expressed disgust at Scotsmen (they were suspected) stealing the stone. The next morning a big stone was found in front of his house. NATIONALIST SCOTLAND

"There seems to be a strong renewal of nationalist feeling in Scotland," Mr. Nicoll reports. There is much talk of setting up a separate provisional government-and they seem to have some good arguments too." Like many of the industrial cities of the world, Glasgow is suffering a power shortage. With no electric signs and curtailment of street lighting, it is re- hearts against Mr. Muzzy's three reason to fear another suit, you mindful of the dark days of the Canadians have much to oe thankful for Mr. Nicoll feels, even though they may have to accept controls on account of the requirements of defence and possible war.

It was a "wonderful education," said Mr. Nicoll, to fly across Canada and see the vast-
