

Blackwood on Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

It irritates Mr. Champion when his opponents hold several good hands in succession. (An independent survey indicates Mr. Champion isn't the only one who feels this way.) However, his irritation rates above the average.

In the rubber in which this hand was played, Mr. Dale and Mr. Muzzy had already held two big hands. On one they had set Mr. Champion 300 points on a sacrifice bid. On the next deal they had bid and made a game. Then this hand came along.

Note Mr. Dale's cautious bidding. Surely he had enough to probe for a slam after his partner opened the bidding and then made a jump rebid. But it was a good thing he didn't.

Mr. Muzzy won the opening lead of the king of diamonds with the ace. Now there are two things Mr. Muzzy likes to do. One of them is to finesse. The other is to ruff losers in dummy. Through the years he has stubbornly resisted the temptation of learning anything about side suit establishment, even in its simplest forms.

At trick two he led a second diamond. Mr. Champion won with the jack, cashed the ace of clubs and led another club to dummy's king. Now Mr. Muzzy came to his hand with the ace of hearts, led a third diamond and ruffed with dummy's nine of hearts. Mr. Abel over-ruffed with the 10 and led a trump. Mr. Muzzy took the rest, discarding his last diamond on the second high spade from the board. Thus he barely made four-odd.

As you see, if Mr. Muzzy had set up dummy's spade suit by ruffing out one round, he could have made six on the hand—throwing all of his losing diamonds on the set-up spades.

Mr. Champion was sore because Mr. Dale had soft-pedaled his good hand and stayed out of trouble. "You should have been in six and down two," he snarled. "Quitting at four-odd was just a lucky shot in the dark."

"It wasn't dark where I was sitting," replied the old master tolerantly. "I could see fine."

Says Scientists Showing Concern Over Travel Ban

OXFORD, England (CP)—Scientists engaged in vital research are becoming increasingly concerned about restrictions on their freedom of movement. Sir John Cockcroft declared here, Sir John, director of the atomic research establishment of Harwell, was addressing the sixth annual Question Conference in session here.

He said that at least 95 per cent of the fundamental nuclear physics information which was kept secret during the war now is free and scientific progress was in no way restricted by security regulations. During the past year 125 papers from the Harwell establishment alone had been published in various scientific journals.

"There are, however, signs that the freedom of movement and discussion in the western world may be subject to more restriction in the future," he said.

Because of the Internal Security Act, 1950, scientists were experiencing long delays in obtaining visas for the United States. It was the future of this freedom which gave scientists most concern at present.

ACCEPT POLICIES

The government, he continued, had chosen the policy of containment by strength. As an essential part of that policy Britain had decided to rearm and the United States had pressed on with its program of atomic armaments. Scientists had been faced with the question of whether or not to accept the policy of their government and to work for it, and most of them had made their choice.

Dr. J. Bronowski, director of the National Coal Board's central research establishment, thought present-day scientists were suffering a feeling of "great unease."
They found society unorganized, administrations making a "fearful mess" of human arrangements and no governmental talent for organizing society on anything larger than a village scale.

But the politicians, he said, took a far different attitude. He summed this attitude up as follows:

"We have to use these scientists because, if we do not, we shall not have any bombs. However, we will not trust them an inch and what a dirty job they are doing."

The responsibility of finding a cure, Dr. Bronowski said, was not that of the man who made the bomb, pulled the trigger or voted the credits. The responsibility, he contended, was primarily communal and must be accepted by the people who marked the election ballot papers.

Enthusiasm Is Lacking

VANCOUVER.—One of the greatest weaknesses in modern merchandising is the lamentable lack of enthusiasm on the part of store personnel. This was stressed by Wilf Lockley, manager, Valley Radio & Electric, Mission, while speaking here recently. Mr. Lockley said more training of sales personnel was needed in both large and small stores.

He told of his own experiences where he had visited stores where employees had commented to him on how expensive merchandise was and that they even made it difficult to buy what he wanted.

He said there was a need for the wholesaler and distributor to aid the retailers operating smaller businesses in training of their employees.

Mr. Lockley said business today needed undivided attention and the man who is desirous of succeeding in the business he is establishing must be prepared to put it before pleasure. He pointed out that it was not enough to contact prospects, but that the effort should be made to contact logical prospects. Every prospect, he contended, should be analyzed to determine whether or not the man or woman was a potential customer. He felt there was a great deal of waste in developing prospects who are not logical potential customers.

Nothing is more detrimental to successful merchandising, Mr. Lockley said, than to peg up and train a sales staff and then have a sale of a new appliance made which breaks down in a day or two, and the wholesale house keeps the customer waiting for five or six weeks for a new part. While admittedly such things do not happen frequently, Mr. Lockley pointed out that they can and do happen with highly detrimental results on the sales staff's morale.

Brand New Canadian

MONCTON, N.B.—A brand new Canadian arrived for Mr. and Mrs. J. V. M. Beck while on their way from Bloemendaal, Holland, to settle in Sooke, B.C. The parents arrived at Halifax on the SS Zuider Kruis from Rotterdam and boarded a special Canadian National train which was to take them to their destination.

On arrival of the train at Campbellton, N. B., conditions were such that Mrs. Beck was taken from the train and placed in the Soldiers' Memorial Hospital in that town where she gave birth to a baby girl. The new Canadian has been named Caroline Renee Desiree Beck.

Mr. and Mrs. Beck already have a family of three boys and two girls and Mrs. Beck left Campbellton tonight on the Ocean Limited of the Canadian National Railways to join her husband and the rest of her family in Sooke where her husband is employed as an upholsterer.

Mrs. Beck speaks very little English but there was a Netherlands family in Campbellton who looked after her. Mr. and Mrs. R. Van Stralen who arrived in this country with their three children, a boy and two girls, in December last. The father and the mother can speak very little English but the boy, who is fourteen and attending school in Campbellton, has become quite fluent in English and acted as interpreter.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Beck and Mr. and Mrs. Van Stralen are very glad to be in Canada. Mr. Van Stralen works as a carpenter in a local woodworking factory.

FAMOUS PHRASE
Sir Wilfred Laurier's famous phrase, "The twentieth century belongs to Canada," is said to have been coined by a Klondike miner.

C. W. Jaggs, general manager of Robert Simpson Ltd., T. A. Cook, supervisor of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for British Columbia, and H. N. McPherson of Permanent Tube Products, Vancouver, who arrived in the city by air Sunday, left by air yesterday for Vancouver. They had been on a trip through the central interior on business. With them was James Jackson of Robert Simpson Co. who will fly back from here.
