SHIPS AND WATERFRONT

CFR steamer Princess Norah, having arrived in port at 9 a.m. from Vancouver via Kamano and Kitimat, sailed at 10 o'clock last night on her return south. Passengers disembarking here from the vessel included J. Schmidt, R. W. Hutchinson, J. R. Gilmour and F. G. Little from Kitimat and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wood, W. J. Williams, Mrs. R. Linklater and children, Mrs. S. Umbley, A. E. Chambers, G. L. Green and Mrs. R. E. Green from Vancouver.

Improvements made on Union Steamship Co.'s coastal liner Camosun, which is back on the run after undergoing annual overhaul in Vancouver, include the replacement of old cast iron piping throughout the ship as part of the federal fire protection regulations, with copper piping which presents a much more slightly appearance. Southbound from Alice Arm and Stewart, the Camosun was in port this morning enroute back to Vancouver. Passengers disembarking from the vessel when she arrived from Vancouver Sunday afternoon were E. Jensen, V. H. Arney, P. M. Parry, W. W. Trotter, Russ Davis, Dr. J. B. Harrison, I. Eaton, C. Anderson, J. S. Hunter, William Sorichan, Miss J. Anderson, Frank Alexee, M. Clifton, G. Jeffrey and Mr. and Mrs. J. Strand.

ray... Reflects and Reminisces

Thirty-seven years ago, the First Great War broke out. Not many who lived in Prince Rupert then are here now. Of the present population, comparatively few can recall much about what some were pleased to call the start of Armageddon. Nearly every one was young, or of early middle life. Prince Rupert, today has plenty of active citizens who then had not been born.

Recruiting, with its undertone of gaiety, was not delayed. Some already drilling had thoughts of relatives overseas. Canadians, never before outside of Canada, felt the call of adventure. The Irish Fusiliers from Vancouver marched ashore and camped in the building that had been the Hotel Premier. Thereafter, you knew no more heedless strolls, or wanderings along the waterfront. Instead, the sharp command "Halt. Who goes there?" Once during those memorable August weeks, a thrill of fear swept the townsite. A cruiser was sighted! Could it be German? Not at all! The ship was only HMCS Rainbow looking things over 500 miles north. A reporter in a rowboat tried to call.

War appeared to stimulate the social spirit. Dances, parades, speeches, recitations, band concerts multiplied. All at once, it seemed, a tune called "Tipperary" came to town, to be whistled by everybody. And soon there was another—"Keep the Home Fires Burning." It had a catchy air. And what was it that Lord Kitchener had said? Well, a man like him can't be wrong. He had told Irving Cobb, an American correspondent, the war would last about three years. And there were those in Prince Rupert who were guessing about it being all over by Christmas.

Admiral Craddock's squadron was sunk off Peru by Admiral Von Spee's ships, and that was that. Later on, Von Spee threw a scare into British Columbia ports, but actually it is doubtful if he sailed very far north. Anyway, destruction overtook him and his men, when Admiral Sturdee's more powerful fleet suddenly appeared off Falkland Islands.

VICTORIA REPORT

... by J. K. Nesbitt

Too Bad Hospital Insurance in Politics But It's a Good Thing

VICTORIA.—It's too bad politics has crept into B.C.'s hospital insurance. Of course this was bound to happen, once a committee of the Legislature was appointed to inquire into this most necessary social service.

One wonders now why the committee was appointed. Its members have worked hard, giving many hours of their time, and all their energies. But the investigation has merely stirred things up. There's not much doubt that, if it hadn't been for all this stirring up, hospital insurance would be working well now.

During the recent flurry over hospital insurance, you could see politics. This is natural enough for our very system of government is based on politics. To say politics is creeping into hospital insurance is not to say there is anything dishonest.

Opposition Leader Harold Winch made the most of a difference of opinion between members of the board and Health and Welfare Minister Turnbull. Mr. Winch went about demanding resignation of Mr. Turnbull or the board, even threatened to resign himself from the committee.

Committee chairman Syd Smith was reported as boiling mad with Mr. Turnbull as was Mr. Winch. However, politics made it necessary for Mr. Smith to keep his mouth shut. He couldn't very well blast a cabinet minister of the Coalition which he supports and he certainly would not go after a minister of his own party. Both Smith and Turnbull are Liberals and, with an election not too far away, Liberals must stick together.

Don Brown, another member of the board, being a Conservative, could let go at Mr. Turnbull. He did, intimating no cabinet minister is going to insult members of the Legislature.

So, you see, politics has crept into hospital insurance. It must, as long as members of the Legislature, of all political groups, inquire into it.

Hospital insurance has become a subject for much ill-informed gossip. It has become popular to attack hospital insurance.

The plain fact of the matter, however, is this: if you have your premium paid up and must go into hospital, and come out with, say, a $500 bill, the hospital insurance service pays the bill.

There are suggestions in legislative corridors that perhaps the sales tax might be increased to five per cent, the extra two per cent going for hospital insurance, with all premiums dropped.

This seems like a good suggestion. It would save the tremendous, costly trouble of collecting hospital premiums. It would cover everyone and two per cent added to the present three per cent sales tax seems a painless way of paying for something that can be very painful indeed—a big hospital bill.

In the meantime, in the heat and fury of argument and political bickering, this important fact shouldn't be forgotten: hospital insurance, as far as the patients are concerned, is today a success in British Columbia. This fact cannot be denied.

Prince Rupert Paying Four Million Dollars for Rats

It is costing Prince Rupert $4,000,000 a year to maintain a rat population of 200,000, Hugo Kraupner told the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce last night. This has been arrived at from a statistical basis that one rat does $20 actual damage to food and in other ways in a year.

Mr. Kraupner, after a convincing anti-rat dissertation, induced the chamber to take up the fight against "the most dangerous and useless pest in the world" by appointing a special committee to work with Dr. Duncan Black, medical health officer, in his campaign to rid the city of rodents. The campaign would be a three-pointed one:

- (1) Poisoning.
- (2) Control of domestic garbage by careful handling of garbage cans.
- (3) Rat-proofing of homes.

It was also proposed that the city should take more drastic means to destroy rats by poison powder pending more thorough incineration.

Ald. Harold Whalen informed the chamber that the city here was considering an incineration process similar to that of the city of New Westminster.

ALERT BAY.—A man named Jack Coonan whose home was in Saskatoon, was shot and killed while hunting near Alert Bay at the week-end. He had been mistaken for a deer. Weather was rainy and visibility was poor.

"Sealed Cargo" Sea Adventure

Adventure, mystery and romance comprise the triple theme of "Sealed Cargo," sea drama for which Dana Andrews, Carla Balenda and Claude Rains have the starring roles at the Capitol Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Andrews is seen as master of a Gloucester fishing boat who reluctantly agrees to take Miss Balenda, a Canadian nurse, to her home in a little Newfoundland fishing village. On the way they encounter a disabled square-rigger and tow it into port—only to learn that the seemingly harmless vessel is actually a supply-ship for Nazi submarines. The ensuing drama turns on the daring efforts of the outnumbered fishermen to capture and destroy the ship.

Philip Dorn is in featured support of the starts. Onslow Stevens and Eric Feldary have prominent roles in the screen version of Edmund Gilligan's Saturday Evening Post story.

Seasonal Fish Boat Clearance

W. J. Scott suggested at last night's meeting of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce that west coast fishing vessels might be accorded the same privilege as those on the east coast whereby seasonal instead of individual trip clearances might be granted.

At present fishing vessels on the Pacific Coast have to clear for each trip to the deepsea fisheries. On the Atlantic coast, they have to obtain only one clearance which covers them for the season.

The proposal was referred to the fisheries committee to confer with the industry, the fishermen and the customs on the matter.

The requirements of the International Fisheries Commission were one reason why the individual clearances were required, President J. C. Gilker suggested.

Completion of Northern Road Pressed Again

Letter from Arthur M. Boutillier, an Alberta man, inquiring if Prince Rupert was not interested in the building of a highway from Edmonton through Yellowhead Pass to the Pacific Coast, as being urged by Mayor Parsons of Edmonton, prompted the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce at last night's meeting to have the highway committee renew representations for the completion of the missing link east of Prince George in the northern transprovincial highway.

Mr. Boutillier's letter emphasized the vital importance of the highway westward from Edmonton to the Pacific Coast from the national defence, industrial and tourist standpoints.

Beautiful KEM-GLO the most economical enamel! NEEDS NO PRIMER OR UNDERCOATER

Chickens have the nasty habit of pecking each other's eyes when they get into a tiff. And once the flock sees blood they all pile in and make it a free-for-all. One farmer made them cut out the rough stuff by making "spectacles" of aluminum foil. No more trouble!

We never know who will think up what new use for aluminum. But we do know that the demand for this light, strong, non-rusting metal keeps on going up and up and up. That's why Alcan is busy on new dams and power plants and smelters to further step up supply. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).
