Sailors Need Cheery News

ABOARD HMCS CAYUGA AT SEA—News from home. That is one of the greatest morale builders the ship's company of the Canadian destroyer now serving in the Far East. At the top of the list, of course, comes mail. For those at sea, it is sometimes difficult to imagine the air of eagerness on a ship when she gets word there is mail for her on the tanker or ammunition ship coming up the Korean coast to replenish her supplies; or when the ship is headed back for one of the United Nations naval bases in Japan and everyone is sure there will be a letter waiting.

It is an emotion which can only come from men who are cut off from home by several thousand miles of ocean and performing a variety of tasks, sometimes exciting, often routine and trying in its demands for exactness; and its lack of relief from boredom.

Mail brings happiness, or most of it does, for there are exceptions. Chaplain Bruce Peglar, Protestant chaplain with the destroyers out here, has a few observations to make on this.

"Wives, above all, should try to write a letter emphasizing the cheery aspects of home life," he says, "and eliminate as far as possible the worries, cares and personal complaints that eat the heart out of a man who is trying to do his job."

Some of the problems presented to him as chaplain he finds caused by mournful letters. A cry letter from home is the greatest morale booster in the Korean theatre," says Chaplain Peglar.

Perhaps second in importance, is the magazines and other reading matter which arrive aboard the ships. Chaplain Richard Ward, Roman Catholic chaplain to the Canadian seaver here, offers his thanks to the organizations in particular of their assistance. To both the "Serve Officers' Wives, HMCS Chippewa, Winnipeg, and the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Legion he expresses the appreciation which is felt in the ships for reading material which has been sent.

Early this year, the Winnipeg reserve officers' wives asked what would be most appreciated and the answer was "mostly magazines." Since then, they have been sending a constant supply. The Ottawa Legion branch has been sending current copies of various magazines since early last fall.

"These two are much appreciated, since everyone's spare time is mainly spent in reading," says Father Ward. "It is amazing the amount of reading material that can be consumed."

"The magazines are handed from person to person until they become dog-eared. Beyond mail and movies, these magazines are among the biggest morale factors out here."

NAVAL HISTORY and tradition has a new significance for cadets who took training cruises from Canada to the United Kingdom this summer because they saw first hand the historic 100-metre base of the Royal Navy. In the photo at left, cadets proceed on board Nelson's famous flagship, HMS Victory, to see the cramped spaces in which England's heroes lived, fought and died. At the right, they are shown a model of one of the old muzzle loading cannon which formed the Victory's main armament.

Goldfish Love Cornmeal Mush

MARTINSVILLE, Indiana (AP)—That far-away look in the eyes of your pet goldfish may be a yearning for corn-meal mush from Indiana.

The Grassyfork Fisheries here claim to be the goldfish capital of the world, and some 400,000-500,000 flashy fish have slithered out into the world from the 675 ponds on the firm's seven farms.

Long ago the firm found that prize specimens, the big ones used for breeding, thrived on mush. It has a vat large enough to heat up 7,000 pounds at a time.

Grassyfork's development is something like a soap opera. Eugene Shireman's marshy farm hadn't seemed good for much of anything except mosquitoes, until in 1899 an enterprising soap salesman from Indianapolis decided a bowl of goldfish might be an enticing premium to boost his sales.

The soap company was out of business by the time Grassyfork got into production, but other soap companies fell in with the goldfish premium idea. The fish caught the eye of Americans. They showed up in dime stores and pet shops. College boys swallowed them. Fishermen tried them as bait—and still use them.

Shireman was delighted to find the iron and lime in southern Indiana water heightened the red coloring in the fish.

That vivid color is the keynote of the whole Grassyfork operation. Harry Wood, biologist at Grassyfork for 27 years, looks for that brilliance (and well-to-do bodies) in his continual search for new breeding stock.

When he spots a pond of choice fish, it's drained, and the best of the lot stay on at Grassyfork to spawn fish for marketing. BIG AND HUSKY
The assortment of males and females isn't left to chance. After years of handling fish, Wood can usually differentiate at a glance. If there's any doubt, the test is as simple as the whiskers on a man's face. The gilt plate of the male goldfish feels rough and whiskery to the touch; the female's is smooth. The breeders average about three years old, but Wood remembers some that have lived to the ripe old age of 16 years. Most of them don't live past five years. They're usually 14 to 22 inches long.

That's far too large for the usual household goldfish but don't worry about your pet bursting his bowl.

"They stay small when they're kept in confined places," Wood said. "We keep the market fish crowded in ponds to keep them small. They can grow as long as eight inches in one season in an uncrowded pond."

Mush helps the breeders grow big and husky—the "small fry" being grown for the market get no such delicacies. The culled-out breeders are sold for ornamental fish ponds.

The common orange-colored goldfish usually sell in stores and shops at a nickel or a dime each. The Chinese Moors, Fantails and Shubunkins bring fancier prices like 25 to 50 cents.

Screen News And Reviews

"The Gunfighter" has hit the target at the Capitol Theatre. Happily received by reviewers and average moviegoers alike, the western drama tells of the last hours in the hard life of a gunfighter who wants to go straight but finds his reputation catching up with him.

Helene Westcott, Millard Mitchell and Jean Parker head Peck's supporting cast, which further includes Karl Malden, Skip Homeier, Anthony Ross, Verna Felton, Ellen Corby and Richard Jaeckel. The Nunnally Johnson production was directed by Henry King, who also guided Peck and Mitchell in the successful "Twelve O'Clock High" earlier this year. William Bowers wrote the screenplay from a story by Bowers and Andre de Togh.
