OWN HOME AGAIN—New London headquarters of the Associated Press is a few blocks from famed St. Paul's Cathedral on Farrington Street. The seven-storey building, just off Fleet Street, is built on a site which 15 months ago was a bomb-scarred pit. It embodies modern facilities for news gathering and distribution and the largest photo plant in Europe. The London office of The Canadian Press, which was in the AP building on Tudor Street when it was bomb-wrecked in 1940, is in the new building. In the interim, both AP and CP were housed in the (CP PHOTO) Reuters building on Fleet Street.

Galloway Rapids bridge is under study and surveys have been made with a view to erecting a new bridge within the next few years if not sooner, announces L. E. Smith, district engineer for the provincial department of public works.

Speaking of the bridge, Mr. Smith said he realized it was a "hazard." The new bridge would have a much shorter span and would be straight. He favored speed limit signs to the approaches of the existing bridge.

Galloway Rapids bridge is a key span in the local highway system, leading off Prince Rupert's Kaien Island to the main-

On Education

Sound Background Is Held Prime Requisite

OTTAWA (CP)-Prime Minister St. Laurent's education had a humble beginning - in an old tenement house-but out of it grew two great convictions. One was that no amount of modern educational equipment can replare a wise teacher. The other is that men of different races, creeds and religions can live peaceably together if only there is goodwill.

The prime minister, now 69. tells of this in a statement prepared for Canadian Education

"As a child," recalls Mr. St. Laurent, "I lived in a village in ert H. Parker, head of the com- over 60 years ago educational oppany, following his return last portunities for the small minority of Catholic children were noth-The property, located on the ing like those provided at the

"During the six years I attended this rather primitive school, I had the good fortune to have two good teachers who had the capacity to excite the curiosity of their pupils and thus make them want to know more about many

"Those teachers wisely realized that it was not sufficient to lead us youngsters to the fountain of knowledge; they had to make us want to absorb something from the fountain.

"I think that is still true of the voungsters today even though fountains may be much more ornate and their contents perhaps more abundant."

The school Mr. St. Laurent attended 60 years ago was at his birthplace at Compton, Quebec. From there he went to St. Charles College at Sherbrooke, Que., and to Laval University to launch a law career that made him one of the best known corporation lawyers in the country before he swept into politics. He has been granted honorary degrees from more than a halfdozen universities.

But that humble beginning still is deeply impressed on the prime .051/4 minister's mind, for there it was that he learned, not by precept but by example, that "it is possible in our country for people of goodwill to live and let live without being called upon to sacrifice any of those essentials to which any group desires to hold
