give a triple-button effect.

A debonair "Dandy" look is achieved by Jean Desses in a double-breasted jacket that buttons only to the waist. The peplum is cut away in a long oblong, the edges of which are decorated with buttons from waist to hem.

An apron front is the work of Pierre Balmain. A double-breasted jacket is buttoned from collar to just before the waist. This gives a squared lap-over effect to a curved cut-away peplum.

Hardy Amies accentuates a double-breasted jacket by means of a wide double curve. The outward curves at bust and hips are complemented by double buttoning. The inward curve at waist has only one button. This gives a distinctive five-button effect.

Button Styling In New Clothes

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON — You may think a suit just a skirt and packet with buttons and pockets fulfilling a useful purpose.

If so, take a look at the latest couture designs shown in both London and Paris and you'll see just how wrong you can be. On close study, buttoning will emerge as a fundamental part of good design, as individual as a thumbprint.

And like a thumbprint, there is a lot of variation. For instance, compare the many methods of fastening used by leading designers on both sides of the channel.

London's Victor Stiebel gives importance to the peplum of a plain, classic suit by curving the front and ending the cross-over in a sharp diagonal point, secured by large buttons. Buttoning from waist to bust is then perfectly straight, lending even greater emphasis to the diagonal peplum slant.

A silk afternoon suit by Digby Moron with straight buttoning from bust to hips has scalloped hem to the jacket front. Draped pockets give him emphasis and the loose ends to a pocket bow, flowing freely, give side interest to the skirt.

USES CHECK FACINGS

Jean Desses gives French chic and a diagonal slant to a plain jacket by the use of check facings. The jacket edge is thrown back from collar to hem in an ample diagonal fold that complements the turn-back of the opposite peplum edge. There is no buttoning to disturb the clean-cut line from collar to hem. The waist is held by a narrow belt.

Whether English or French, button-styling is interesting and smart. Charles Creed gives a military look by means of button-taps bridging the gap to a jacket that is not quite edge-to-edge. Matching buttons down each side

OIL MAKES A COUNTRY STRONG

"SURE... I WAS HERE WHEN IT STARTED!"

You can bet Jimmie was on hand when the first Imperial drilling crew turned up at the farm gate. And he's been an untiring fence post superintendent ever since. But that's not all—in his short lifetime he's lived enough years to see the growth of a new major industry.

Less than five years ago Canada's oil producing industry was far from robust. Our oil fields were dwindling and produced only one barrel in every 10 we used.

Today only eight countries in the world are known to have larger oil reserves than Canada. And production this year is expected to meet about one-third of our needs.

Every barrel of this "home grown" crude lessens our dependence on other countries and brings us a step closer to self-sufficiency in oil. With oil increasingly important to our daily life in peace or war, any improvement in security of supply means new security for Jimmie and for all of us.

Canada's newest major industry gives promise of becoming one of her greatest.

About Canada's Oil—

Last year Canada's oil industry stepped up its production of crude oil to more than a billion gallons, an increase of 35 per cent. above 1949.

Imperial drilled more than 400 wells in 1950 searching for and developing oil fields in Alberta.

Canadians are using almost twice as much oil as they did only five years ago.

Oil now provides for one-quarter of Canada's total energy requirements.
