VANCOUVER WEDDING—A charming and happy bride was Miss Dorothy Todd, until recently stewardess on the run between Prince Rupert and Sandspit, as she left Canadian Memorial Church on St. Patrick's Day with her bridegroom, Stuart Furk, well known public accountant of Prince Rupert. After their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Furk are returning to Prince Rupert to make their home in the Stone Building. Mrs. Norma Reynolds, the matron of honor, is also seen in this picture.

Virginia Davis— Program of High Delight

There may have been more ambitious programs in the many high class musical presentations that Civic Centre enterprise has brought for Prince Rupert's pleasure but none have been more sheerly delightful than that of Virginia Davis, captiv- ating young American soprano, last night before a highly en- thusiastic audience.

Miss Davis is not only a lovely singer, with pure, sweet soprano voice, capable of facile inflex- ion into the contralto range, but she is a charming actress.

It was as much as an actress as a singer that she shone last night in her "Portraits of Song," a title which was intriguingly exemplified by the vivid per- sonality of this beautiful young woman with her expressive eyes, diminutive grace and ready meaning in every flex and movement.

Miss Davis showed, too, re- markable versatility, in quite un- usual selections of numbers.

First was a miscellaneous group of lighter selections, among which was the Austrian "Lullaby to an Orphan Boy" which was considered by many one of the outstanding pieces of the whole program. Her acting ability was combined with dia- lectic ability in the two charac- ter numbers—"Laird of Cock- pen" (Scottish) and "Johnny I Hardly Knew Ye" (Irish). To make things easily understand- able, Miss Davis told the stories of her songs in almost every case.

In her second group, Miss Davis went into more serious vein, turning to the French, in another series of song stories, culminating in Maurice Ravel's arrangement of the impressive "Kiddish," Hebrew Prayer for the Dead. To the more deeply discriminating this was possibly the finest number of the even- ing from the vocal and drama- tic standpoint.

UNUSUAL
Something really unusual was a group of nine little song po- ems actually written by Third Grade school children and put to music by the artist's mother, Hilda Davis, operatic star.

Fourth group was featured by two intriguing folk songs and three Louisiana spirituals. The latter might also have been classed as outstanding program items.

As a surprise between third and fourth groups, Miss Davis introduced the mountain court- ing song, "Louisiana Dove," while her encores at program's end were "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" and the rol- licking "Arkansas Traveler," which one seldom hears except as a violin jig but which Miss Davis recited vocally with char- acteristic gesticulation. Thus ended the program on a high note of appreciation.

Miss Gwendolyn Williams was a perfect piano accompanist, her (Continue on page 6)

Natural Causes In Infant Death

A coroner's inquiry Wednes- day determined the death of Barbara Auckland, 15-month- old adopted baby of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lincoln of Port Simpson, to have been due to "natural causes." The baby died before arrival at the Prince Rup- ert General Hospital.

Burial was in Fairview Ceme- tery this afternoon, with the funeral service in Grenville Court Chapel by Rev. L. G. Seiber.

Next of kin are the foster parents, and Mr. and Mrs. George Auckland, Comox Ave- nue, the original parents of the child. Mrs. Lincoln is a sister to Mrs. Auckland.
