People Hungry For Good Music.

The way in which people flocked to hear the music at the theatre on Sunday night was a revelation. For two hundred people to stand for two hours in order that they might enjoy classic music, some of it of a purely sacred nature, is a hint to church managers. Many church people were disappointed to find that they were unable to get in on their arrival and some of them suggested that it was hardly fair to those who went to church to be debarred for that reason. A thousand people enjoyed themselves at a time when many, especially those away from home, usually find the time hang heavily.

It has been suggested that possibly in these days of Church Union ideals, the churches might unite on a Sunday night musical service at the theatre, possibly securing the services of the musical society for the singing and with several of the best local soloists aiding.

People are hungry for good music but they are not hungry to listen to long prayers nor to hear long sermons. It is useless to argue that people ought to like those things. Perhaps they should, but they do not. They show clearly that they do not because they stay away from church. They show that they like good music because they turn out to hear it and patronize the collection plate when they get it.

How many people have stood for two hours because they could not gain admission to a church service in this city. Possibly they have done so but it has not become a habit that could be noticed.

We are strongly in favor of music, all that it is possible to get. Churches where the music is good are usually the churches where the crowds go.

New Athletic Association Here.

Some committees are at work gathering data and making other arrangements for the organization of an athletic association in this city that will take over the Agricultural Building and use it as a gymnasium. Very soon one of these committees, as soon as it knows just what it wants, will ask the people of the city for support. The general idea is to make the association helpful to the town. The chief difficulty will be in getting a good physical director who will organize the games and classes and keep things running smoothly. There is no doubt that such an organization is badly needed here and that it will receive the support of everyone when it is launched.

Editor's Home At Vanderhoof.

The field secretary of the National Editorial Association must have made an extremely favorable report on the Vanderhoof district for the executive to have decided to make it their permanent home. At any rate it means a good deal to the Nechaco valley and also to the whole of central and northern British Columbia. The big hotel which was commenced at that point some years ago will be completed at once and editors from all over the country, especially the big free lance special writers, are expected to visit the district often and they are bound to tell of the place in some of their articles. The little town of Vanderhoof is to be congratulated on its luck. Doubtless there is a good future for it, for if it has good hotel accommodation it will soon prove to be the Mecca of all commercial men and other travellers through the country.
