The gnowledge of the noot, the Kispiox Indian who was a fugitive from justice for several months. Stuart Henderson of Victoria, who unsuccessfully contested Victoria in Monday's election as the Liberal candidate, had the defence of Gun-a-noot and learned of the big copper property. He later organized an expedition and prospected for it with the assistance of Gun-a-noot, but the Indian was not able to locate it.

Later on an organization was formed of Prince Rupert and Edmonton railway trainmen, and the Junkers plane, operated last year by Pilot Joerss, was brought into British Columbia to search for the property. This effort was also unsuccessful, and the plane was left neglected in the vicinity of Smithers for several years until it was secured by Dick Corless.
