SPORT CHAT

A fleet of four United States yachts have answered the challenge of Sir Thomas Lipton for the America's Cup with the launchings of the Weetamoe at Bristol, R.O., and the Yankee at a Boston yard. The launchings came as the doctory Irish sportsman was observing his 80th birthday anniversary. The other two United States boats, the Enterprise and the Whirlwind, were launched at Bristol April 14, and Boston, May 7, respectively. The four must now fight it out in a series of trials or eliminating races for the honor of meeting Sir Thomas' challenger, Shamrock V. off Newport next September. Upon one of the four will rest the responsibility of defending the famous trophy, emblematic of Columbia's rule of the wave over Britannic yachtsmen since 1851. In that year the schooner America led Britain's fastest yachts around the Isle of Wight and brought home the cup. Racing for the recovery of the cup, which is bottomless, began on this side of the Atlantic sixty years ago. If the vast amount of money, expended in competition for it and in its defense is considered, the trophy's lack of a bottom becomes almost symbolic. This year's racing alone, it is estimated, will represent an outlay of at least $4,000,000 before Sir Thomas leaves these shores, with or without a trophy, which originally cost 100 guineas. It will be his fifth effort to recover it for Britain and the Royal Ulster Yacht Club and many claim his chances are brighter than ever before. Although figures show the dimensions of the five yachts vary considerably, they are for practical purposes much alike and differences represent the designers' theories. To gain an advantage in one direction they were forced to make concessions in another to conform to the 76 foot rating under the universal rule.

The designers of the five boats are: Shamrock, Charles E. Nicholson; Weetamoe, Clinton H. Crane; Yankee, Frank C. Paine; Whirlwind, L. Francis Herreshoff, and Enterprise, W. Starling Burgess. All have been personally or through members of their families associated with previous America's Cup races. The Yankee is Boston owned and the other three were built by New York syndicates. The Whirlwind is generally considered the "heavy weather" boat of the fleet. The Shamrock V. appears designed to be at her best in light air.

Man in the Moon

Those who thought summer was not coming this year were fooled yesterday. It came. Last year I went across the harbor on the lucky day but this year I couldn't get away.

Beware of becoming a big gun. You are likely to be fired.

I know a woman who treats her husband like a dog. She is always fondling him.

Jake says he thinks the conversation in the local barber shops was much more interesting before the ladies took to going there. He says he does not like racy talk.

He had apparently lost some money. He searched his pockets and finding them all empty dropped dead on the street. No, he wasn't the nationality you thought.

If this fashion of going without hats keeps up, what will the haberdashers do?
