> The champion Athletics led the American League in fielding with the same average they attained. last year, .975. Superior fielding was an important factor in the success of the champions during the season as well as in the World Series. High class fielding also played a large part in the success of the Washington team which finished, next to the Mackmen, with the handsome average of .974. Veteran Joe Judge, who finished his fifteenth season with Washington, was all but perfect in the field, accepting 1.117 chances in 120 games, being charged with but two errors.
