Charles MacKay, who promoted the Ferguson group of claims in the Ingenika River country and who was very well known throughout Northern British Columbia, died recently at his home in Victoria. The late Mr. MacKay was one of the pioneer miners of the Kootenay district and took a keen interest in labor organizations.

Officials of B. C. Silver report ex- the term and it does not mean that tremely favorable progress at the property recently. Cables were sent to the head offices of Selukwe Gold Mining & Finance Company in London, stating that on No. 6 level a raise was put up 550 feet from No. 2 shaft. Average values were $37 a ton over a width of five and a half feet. A test hole showed the ore to have an additional width of six feet. Operations have been resumed in this section. Some months ago drift No. 636 had been driven 982 feet and the ore zone had been exposed for a definite length of 120 feet, with values averaging $22 across a width of 10 feet. The ore located was stated to be the continuation of the Premier 4H stope. It was a feature of this section of the property that, as in the case of the Premier, the ore found was high in gold values. Indications pointed to the existence of a substantial ore body which it was believed would connect with the famous Premier 4H stope, 100 feet above, and that this ore was likely to be found to continue downwards to a depth considerably lower than that yet worked by the B. C. Silver. In March of this year further drilling disclosed the downward continuation of the ore zone 100 feet below No. 6 level, but the zone, although well silicified and highly mineralized, did not show commercial values. Operations, it would appear from the cable, have now recommenced and further news will be awaited with interest,

Over this she wore a matching jacquette, and her corsage bouquet was on Talisman roses and lily of the valley. Both the bride and groom were unattended, and the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. E. T. Swanson.

Mrs. Swanson, mother of the bride, chose a smart gown of mauve-figured flat crepe, while her corsage bouquet was of roses and lily of the valley, and Mrs. Mc-Tavish, mother of the groom, wore black georgette and cream lace, her corsage bouquet being of similar flowers. Centring the bride's table was a three-tier wedding cake embedded in pink tulle, while pink roses and lily of the valley were also used, arranged in silver vases. Glowing tapers in matching color shed a soft glow over the Italian cut-work cloth.

Mr. and Mrs. McTavish later left for a honeymoon in California and Mexico, the bride donning a smart tailleur of green flat crepe designed with circular skirt and bolero efrect over ochre crepe, for travelling. With this she wore matching shoes and a soft close-fitting hat turned off the face, and a dark brown muskrat coat. After a month Mr. and Mrs. McTavish will reside at the Devonshire Hotel in Vancouver before leaving to take up residence at Selwyn Inlet, Queen Charlotte
