McFarland Says He Is Taking Over Management of Pool For Reason of National Emergency

WINNIPEG, Nov. 29.—John L. McFarland of Calgary, one of Western Canada's most prominent wheat men, stated yesterday that he had accepted the general management of the Canadian Wheat Pool only from a sense of public responsibility in what he considers a national emergency. He declared that he would accept no salary in disposing of wheat now held by the Pool. He stated that, while it was a serious situation, it was not without elements of optimism. With grain selling below cost of production, consumption was being largely stimulated. Also the situation offered speculators the opportunity of entering the market on an investment basis.

Adventure After Adventure For Amy Johnson; Lost Way In Fog Not Long Ago; Landed at Sea

No one must imagine that because Amy Johnson has returned home from her wonderful trip to Australia that her adventures are ended. She is not like that. The other day she had another hairbreadth escape, particulars of which have arrived here in a letter from her father to his brother, T. H. Johnson of Prince Rupert. The letter said:

"Having been invited to attend some functions at Hull, Amy left at 2:45 on Sunday in her plane. She experienced heavy clouds and bad visibility, so immediately got above the clouds and was some 6,000 feet up. There she found perfect weather, blue sky and sunshine overhead and the clouds beneath. Then, thinking it was time that she was at Hull, she began to come through the clouds and was fully 20 minutes coming through them. When through, she found she was in darkness and also found she was over the North Sea with no idea in what part. She turned right west and then saw some lights. Coming down to them it was found that they were ships. This went on for an hour and still she could not see any land and it was very dark. She got 'windy' and felt she had to do something, so she took off her shoes and decided to come down on the sea alongside a ship and swim for it. She got her door opened and had almost decided on this course when she saw a lighthouse and, proceeding to it, located a beach and came down on it, landing on soft sand in a very small space.

"Amy found she had landed on Spurn Point. She got on the telephone and we went to bring her home. Today she moved her plane to the aerodrome.

"What a girl! Where does she get her nerve?" concludes the letter. "Tonight she is the guest of honor at the Aero Club ball. On Wednesday the fishing industry is making her a presentation and on Wednesday evening her old school are giving her a dinner. Then on Friday she goes to Scarborough for some gliding events. Really she could be engaged three times every day if she would accept the invitations. In London she is moving right in the tip top circles, so there you are."
