SIXTEEN WAYS TO SERVE POTATOES

For a time we snubbed the potato rather rudely, in our zeal to banish excess weight. But now that strenuous dieting is no longer the fashion, pota- by toes are again firmly entrenched in our menus. Meals aren't meais, we find, without them.

times you will want the simple, mealy in which Carnation Milk is used. Other times, nothing will fit in | will want it for all cooking. the menu so well as bursting baked potatoes, golden with butter and glowing with paprika.

With sweetbreads or a tiny chop you may prefer the daintiness of creamed or parsley potatoes; with thick and juicy steaks, the heartiness of lyonnaise or souffle, in the half shell or French fried. toes in various ways-potatoes au gratin, Chantilly and Delmonico all being favourites of mine.

It all depends upon the milk the quality of the milk is most important. If you use the best of creamy except part of the water.

Being evaporated to double richness, Carnation Milk makes the creamiest of sauces, without the extravagant use of butter. Being "homogenized" cream content is broken up into the minutest particles—it gives a To make up for past neglect, I sug- | wonderfully fine, smooth texture.
