NEW BOOK BY A BOY

"A Boy of the Great North West," just published by the Graphic Publishers Ltd., of Ottawa is written by a lad, Robert Watson, whose father also is a writer of some note.

The book contains an account of a number of interesting events or descriptions of interesting things incident to a number of years of travel through the western country. The publishers speak of the book as "The rousing experiences of a young Canadian among cowboys, hunters, trappers, fur traders, fishermen and Indians."

Some of the experiences took place in the Prince Rupert district and for that reason are particularly interesting. nate a candidate for the next pro-The illustrations are from photograph and there sa birdseye picture of Prince Rupert and a number of totems including those at Kitwanga and Alert Bay.

Speaking of Prince Rupert, the author says: "Prince Rupert is about 22 years of age and it has made great progress in that time. The city seems to be cut out of the face of the mountain, just as Seattle was, and no matter where you go you face the beautiful sea."

While possibly in its boyish way the book is a little sketchy, it will prove very interesting, especially to boys who wish to know about the outdoor life as told by one who has lived it and appreciated it and who has the ability to convey his impressions in simple language to his readers.

Robert Watson is a Vancouver boy.
