DURBAN, South Africa, Aug. 27: -Durban's new bathing regulations were promulgated in the Provincial Gazette recently. From now on bathers must wear a cloak when not actually on the sands, and must wear a costume that is opaque and covers the bather from the shoulder to midway between the hip and knee. When this regulation was first discussed it was thought that the council had been attacked by the Mother Grundy spirit and would force Natal's young nymphs to conceal their forms in frumpy costumes. But a Durban paper publishes a picture of a girl with not anything more on that she should have. The caption reads: "If girls wear costumes of the length illustrated they will get nothing but ap-
