Carter Halls Company Given Important Work Crossing Skeena River

Job Turned Over By Pacific Salvage Co .-- Foundations and Towers Will Cost $200,000

Another important step in connection with the power development here of the Power Corporation of Canada is about to be taken in the construction of transmission line piers and towers across the Skeena River to convey the power from Falls River, where it will be generated in the power house now under construction, to Prince Rupert. The contract for four large piers, measuring eight and a half feet in breadth and 45 feet in height and constructed of steel sheet piling and concrete, has been let by the

On these piers, high galvanized steel towers will later be erected, so the transmission line itself will be well above all the requirements of navigation on the Skeena River. The whole job, including piers and towers, will run well into $200,000.

The transmission line will cross the Skeena from Tyee on the north LERWICK, Shetland Islands, bank to a point above the mouth of March 31:-Seven men who had the Ecstall River on the south side.
