PREMIER TALKIES

Installation at Northern Mining Town Proves Popular in District

STEWART, Aug. 29.—Those residents of the district who have not been "outside" for the past two years were given a chance to attend their first talking picture last Saturday night when this form of entertainment was inaugurated at the picture show of the Premier Mines Community Club. That the "talkies" are going to prove popular here goes without saying and at the opening performance there was a crowd of some 350 from all parts of the district.

The mechanism worked perfectly, and was a tribute to the company making the installation. This was done by the Canadian Orchestra-phone Co., whose representative, Mr. Dowsley, arrived with his equipment on Tuesday and had it in working order by Friday night. Two shows a week will be put on in future, on Tuesdays and Fridays, and the Community Club will always be assured of a good attendance from Stewart as long as the roads are open to traffic.

Kenneth Group Looking Good

Small Shipments of Ore Already Being Made From Promising Property at Stewart

STEWART, Aug. 29.—The high grade vein on the Kenneth group is widening rapidly as the tunnel advances and prospects for good tonnage of ore are very good. Several of the crew are busy sacking ore and Jack Rennie has a contract for hauling this to the dock for shipment. The Kenneth is the old Mobile property, now being developed by the Argentine Syndicate consisting of Clay Porter, H. P. Gibson and Louis Legge.

POWER FOR THE CITY

Speaker at Rotary Luncheon Tells of Wonderful Developments Taking Place

The wonderful development of the harnessing of electrical power was the theme of a very interesting address given by Ernest Valentine of the Prince Rupert Dry Dock power house staff at the luncheon of the Rotary Club yesterday afternoon. The speaker explained that the supply of electricity was unlimited and it could not be adulterated. All that man could do was to harness it and put it to work.

Development of electrical knowledge had been so great it was difficult keeping pace with its growth. Man was the only creature that could measure things and electricity was of no use until it could be measured. It had been found that it travelled 186,000 miles per second, so rapid that it could travel from the earth to the sun in eight minutes. Was it any wonder that electrical engineers lived a fast life.

The electron was the life cell of electricity, Mr. Valentine said. It was the smallest substance known. When in action these electrons moved so rapidly that the pace was shocking.

Tracing the growth of electrical knowledge from the first person to discover that by rubbing a piece of amber it would attract straws to the time when Thomas Edison made the first generator with one and a half kilowatt power that supplied energy to 25 customers and on to the present day, Mr. Valentine kept the club members intensely interested all the time. He told of the 2,000 horse power plant at the dry dock which took $100 of coal a day to keep it going and employed 12 men. The energy at Falls River cost nothing beyond harnessing and took only two men to operate, yet it would develop ultimately 30,000 horsepower.

Some of the interesting details of control and safety devices were explained and it was shown that the new plant would be the nearest thing to perpetual motion yet discovered. The people here would not be paying for the electrons or for the water that was the motive power but for the collection and distribution of the energy. The developments of power in this way lightened the burden of labor and improved conditions of the world.

At the conclusion the speaker was thanked by President Johnston, who spoke of the keen interest taken in the subject by the members.
