Remains of August Andree and His Companions Reach Tromsoe, Norway

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 3:—Beliefs as to how Capt. Solomon August Andree and his two companions, missing since 1897 on a balloon flight to the North Pole, spent their last days were expressed here by Dr. Gunnard Horn whose sealer Bratvaag is in port after an expeditionary cruise in the course of which it found the remains of the Swedish balloon explorers on White Island east of Spitzenbergen, bringing the bodies on here. The Bratvaag arrived in port yesterday.

Andree and his companions died of exhaustion and slept themselves into death, it is believed by Dr. Horn. The explorers had travelled almost two hundred miles from where their balloon came down over ice and water using frail boats whenever possible and sustained life on White Island only a few months, Horn believes, by killing birds and bears for food. The bodies were found in natural graves of ice and snow. A complete log of the flight was found together with a diary, the latter being badly weatherbeaten.

talent and accomplishments of the lads are a marvel to many.

Alongside this, is the mineral display which is practically negligible this year for no one is very interested in mining these days anyway.

Commercial Stalls

The rest of the downstairs space in the main building is given over pretty well to commercial and advertising stalls, among these being McRae Bros., Albert & McCaffery, W. H. Malkin Co. Ltd., Borden Co., Pacific Milk and Northern B. C. Power Co. A real moving picture show exhibiting short comedies and scenes in the Pacific Milk stand is one of the principal attractions here.

In its usual place off the main floor is to be found the display of fancy work where Prince Rupert ladies once again demonstrate their skill in needle and other handiwork with many beautiful creations which attract the gaze of even mere man. Mrs. John Dybhavn seems to have carried off many first prizes to say nothing of Mrs. S. Batcher, Mrs. H. F. Glassey and others. A corner of this room contains exhibits from school girls which are of credit to them.

In another annex to the main floor is found the show of poultry and pets, possibly not as large as usual but none the less deserving of comment.

The Indian Section covers a good deal of space on one of the upstairs balconies and the natives, in every manner of handiwork, have done themselves proud. Exhibits of household arts, notably sewing and fancywork, are to be seen there in large numbers with many specimens of fine work. School exhibits are also splendid and there are several oil and water color paintings that are excellent indeed. Tendency of the natives to abandon their old arts of weaving and carving for the more modern forms of handiwork is to be noted although memories of the old days are to be seen in the prized relics of R. G. Cunningham's collection of aboriginal arts. In the Indian Section are also the odd vegetable and culinary specimen.

Culinary exhibits by local housewives are up to the usual standard and the display is as interesting as it looks appetizing which may be saying a lot. In bread, cakes, canned goods, etc., Mrs. E. Hellman has taken the largest number of first prizes with Mrs. D. McD. Hunter running her a close second. Both have been persistent exhibitors down through the years.

Of interest to many is the large exhibit of school work such as painting and drawing. Principals and members of their staffs are again to be congratulated for painstaking efforts in assembling and arranging the exhibits.

Fine art and photographic work is also found on the balconies with one corner given over to the professional photography of R. E. Benson who has hung up portraits of many well known local peolpe from His Worship, the Mayor, down.

Midway Popular

For the younger folks, and a lot of the older too, the midway to the rear of the building has much to offer and, judging from the way it was patronized last night, is proving popular. There are the usual games of chance, etc. with curtained off enclosures containing strong men, mysterious ladies and suggesting that there might also be writhing snakes and roaring lions not far from there. This is for the curious to find out. The merry-go-round was also playing a big and jingling trade.

By last evening, most, if not all, the judging of exhibits had been completed. The prize winners will be published as soon as possible.

There was no program in the building last night except for the brief band concert. It was felt that the public might desire this opportunity of viewing the exhibits with a minimum of interruption and disturbance. Starting this evening, there will be nightly vaudeville concerts in the building until the close of the Exhibition.

INTERIOR PULP MILL

Hon. F. P. Burden Still Holds Out Hope For Materialization of Project at Prince George

Returning to Prince George lately after an extended tour of Europe on government business, Hon. F. P. Burden, minister of lands, stated that, while in Montreal, he had met a number of those interested in the project of establishing a pulp and paper mill in Prince George. There was more life in this project than appeared on the surface, Mr. Burden said. A strong Canadian syndicate, he stated, has secured an option on the holdings of the company of which Frank P. Jones is the central figure and has made arrangements for a field examination which was expected to be under way early in September with Marshall Small, timber expert, in charge. While Mr. Burden admitted that immediate market conditions were not very favorable for the commencing of work upon a pulp and paper mill of the size contemplated in the original Prince George project, he said that he had intimated to the persons interested that it would be unreasonable to expect the provincial government to continue to hold the concessions desired by the promoters unless bona fide steps were taken within a reasonable time for the prosecution of the enterprise.

The syndicate which holds the option on the assets of the Fraser River Company is quite distinct from that headed by John Stadler who personally investigated the situation some time ago. Mr. Stadler's option has since expired and the new concern took it over.

Mr. Burden said that he was hopeful something might come out of the existing option but the threatened introduction of pulp from Russia in the United States market was rather disquieting and might tend to slow down launching of the local project. Aside from this feature, however, the prospects for the local enterprise had taken on a very promising outlook.

Elks to Stage 'Queen of Hearts'

Prince Rupert Lodge No. 46, B. P. O. Elks will break into the theatrical limelight about two weeks from now when they will present at the Moose Hall, the three-act musical comedy, "Queen of Hearts," with a cast of 50 people.

The production will be under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. McNaughton, professional show producers, who for the past five years have been presenting annual shows for the Elks at Ketchikan and Juneau. It was because of the excellent recommendations from Elks of Ketchikan, who are well known here, that the local lodge decided to produce the show in Prince Rupert. Mr. and Mrs. McNaughton also have a regular circuit of Elks lodges from Seattle to Los Angeles that they produce for annually.

The show is a combination of a laughable story, with a strong plot; an da series of musical revues that are a riot of color, pretty girls, peppy dances and late song hits. The entire scenery, as well as costuming, is brought to Prince Rupert by the producers, and "Queen of Hearts" will have the same lavish staging as any modern road show. Those who remember the success of the "Beauty Shop," can look forward to even a more pretentious offering in this year's show.

The Elks are presenting the show as a means of raising money for their Christmas cheer fund, and the undertaking should have the support of the entire community.
