Province Comments Editorially on His Rumored Move to Federal Field

The maples are budding down by the banks of the Ottawa, and spring is astir where lately winter was overlord, and up on Parliament Hill the politicians have heard the stomach, biliousness, indigestion, pleasant call of fresh fields, says Vancouver Province editorial. They have heard another call as well, it seems, and there is no prophet now so cautious that he will not tell you to expect an election when the ides of July are come. Mr. Dunning has brought down his budget, and Mr. Mackenzie King is talking about a new cabinet portfolio—and these are sure signs, so the pundits say, that the national welkin will soon be ringing with the cries of the party gladiators. We must not turn a blind eye to these distant signals, but what about a sign or two nearer home? It is a very interesting story, and we hardly know what to say about it. It finds us with those well-known ningled feelings with which we hear that we may shortly have to bid goodbye to an old friend. Perhaps, in a certain contingency, we night bear up in the consolation Pioneer Mines of John Tyson Wilthat our loss was Ottawa's gain. But son, aged 62, formerly of Anyox. wrong-headed in these matters, sons and two daughters. Suppose Mr. Pattullo is duly persuaded to throw up his provincial constituency of Prince Rupert, and to enter the federal lists in some riding of Greater Vancouver-and then suppose that the obfuscated electorate refuses to give up Mr. Stevens or Mr. Ladner or some other wicked Tory, and to take on with the good Mr. Pattullo. It is dreadful thought, and it dims our joy in the springtime, and it distracts our mind painfully from the proper consideration of Mr. Dunning's budget.

Our friend Mr. Pattullo, like great many of our political friends, never takes our advice, and so we shall not presume to advise him in this great decision. But anybody may indulge in a hope, even about a man as sure of his destiny as Mr. Pattullo, and we do really hope that Mr. Pattullo will not do anything rash. We hope he will remember at least how badly we shall all feel about it, in case he should us to start for Ottawa, and
