Vancouver Financial Paper Sees Pacific Coast Outlet for Peace River Greatest 1930 Item in West

What is the most important single item on the program of Western Canada for 1930? The question is an interesting one and gives scope for some varying views, but a majority of observers will probably agree that the Peace River country's development offers possibility for the greatest stimulus to industrial, agricultural and general progress in Western Canada since that eventful day a decade and a half ago, when the Panama Canal mingled the waters and linked the commerce of the Atlan- .___ tic and Pacific oceans with a map- the less to justify its existence and

Premier Brownlee of Alberta, to name only one instance, predicted that within his lifetime there would be in the Peace River country a not too much to expect that by the population of 1,000,000 people and that they would produce there as much grain as does all the rest of the prairie wheat growing belt to-

When that time comes there will be in Western Canada not about 2,- and Canadian National Railways 750,000 people as today, but more directors reports on reconnaissance than double that number. It is trite to say that an agricultural era must precede an industrial tional, as sometimes indicated, will era. It is a time-proved old axiom of political economy. The agricultural era of the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario and the eastern prairie regions, it was that built up the factories of a dozen Quebec and Ontario industrial centres.

Now comes the large scale development of agriculture in the farther west prairies, one of the vastest and most fertile agricultural belts in the world.

New Activities

Our vision is too narrow if we see the opening of the Peace River country only the adding of more millions of bushels of wheat to Canada's export totals.

In the Peace River country's coming development we should see new ndustrial and shipping activity in Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Stewart; new factories and warehouses in Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg, Grande Prairie, Finlay Forkes, and in cities which are mere hamlets in the Peace River country today.

To British Columbia the new agricultural empire will bring the hinterland which will round out an economic unit. For the purchasing power of Alberta and of Northern British Columbia will be so enhanced as to justify the existence of more than double the industrial machinery existing in the province

Place a population of 100,000 on pears to be the most important the land in the Peace River country-a mere handful on the 47,000,-000 fertile acres awaiting cultivation, and there exists, immediately, a producing force that will demand its natural rights—the most direct and economical connection with the Pacific Coast and Vancouver. Bring that population up to 1.000,000 people, as envisioned by the very practical Premier Brown-$1.30 lee, and there will exist a force that will not have to demand anything.
