UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

There may be some truth in the opinions of the so-called "optimists" that the present state of trade is due to the mental attitude of pessimistic people, says "Canadian Insurance" in an editorial article. But it would take a lot of close argument to persuade the heads of a financial institution with several million dollars invested in western farm mortgages that that is all the trouble with the world. Some part of the trouble in Canada is due to the Wheat Pool being greedy and getting stung through guessing wrong. The other part is simply and solely due to the fact that there is too much food in the world for the people who are working and can afford to buy it. When the unemployment situation eases up, then more people can buy more food and the prices of farm produce will slowly rise. Now unemployment is a chronic condition in almost every country of the world. It becomes bad periodically. It is worse now because of the dislocation of trade due to the war. We cannot have the greatest war ever known and the greatest "boom" in stocks ever known without the con- very hideous." sequent greatest depression ever known. If all the unemployed today were properly fed there would be little depression in the farming industry. That they are not properly fed is due to man's inability to understand that they ought to be fed. The best remedy is unemployment insurance. That would simply mean that when trade is bad as it always will be bad periodically till the world comes to seems hardly credible. continues an end, that the wealth of a nation is being divided up a little by means of insurance, so that unemployed people can eat properly, like other people. Personally, we have no patience with those people who assume that unemployment insurance is going to encourage laziness and other evils. All men are lazy and have "evils" in some degree or other and the richer classes are probably the worst in this respect.

The present industrial and financial system has developed the world at a greater pace than ever before and the fluctuations in trade are necessarily of greater violence. tinues the biographer, "which It is up to the leaders therefore to recognize the facts of the permanence of unemployment and "fluctuations" and Newton adds that he was himself remedy them by insurance just the same as other "fluctuations" are covered by insurance. Men insure their lives because they are uncertain whether death is going to cut Lyons (the ambassador) to come them off before their allotted span. They insure their property against the ever present risk of fire. We have yet to hear a good argument why unemployment insurance should not be as useful as other systems of insurance. It is scribing racily his first trip to the difficult to arrange. It is full of pitfalls and social prob- Pacific Coast. That was in the lems. Yet millions are starving and trade is bad and the heads of financial insti- ture tutions are worrying themselves into their graves over their possible losses in investments. The trouble clearly is the retiring governor general's renot that Mother Nature is not bountiful enough. It is simply that man made organizations of systems to get all

Our opinion is that farming prosperity will come back. We can't grow too much if all the people are to be properly
