NAVY LEAGUE AT ATLIN, B. C.

Commander Mathorn, R. N., Addresses Gathering in Court House, Telling of Wonderful Deeds.

Advantage was taken of the visit of Captain Sidney R. Bailey, R. N., and Bryan Williams to hold a special meeting of the Navy League at Atlin. A goodly gathering assembled in the court house and Commander Wm. Mathorn, R. N., presided. In opening the meeting the chairman referred to the satisfactory work of reconstruction that was going on and the necessity for still maintaining the famous password of the navy "Keep Watch." Although the war has had the immediate effect of forming the British Empire into a mighty League of Nations yet we must "keep watch," to sail the good ship of State clear of rocks and shoals and to uphold and fight for our King's motto "Dieu et mon Droit."

Trade Follows Flag.

You know it is a trite saying that "Trade follows the Flag," said Capt. Mathorn. The prosperity of Canada depends on her ability to carry agricultural, forest and mineral products to all parts of the world, and consequently shipbuilding is becoming of vast importance in our national life. It employs thousands of skilled workmen and contributes immensely to the wealth of our Dominion. On the Atlantic and Pacific coasts on the St. Lawrence and on the Great Lakes there are great shipbuilding plants constructing a Canadian navy to be manned by Canadians and to compete in the trade of the world. Our American cousins—all honor to them—are also rushing ships into Blue Waters, and you will be pleased to hear they are nobly raising a fund of $50,000,000 for British seamen in recognition of their bravery and self-sacrifice in face of constant danger during the war. We must remember nearly 20,000 of our sailors lost their lives and nearly 30,000 more were crippled or injured. Our merchant service is truly loyal and contributed splendidly to winning the war, and, to its great credit be said, not a single ship was held up for want of a crew to sail her.

Scapa Flow.

"Scapa Flow is a big black water subject to a succession of gales throughout the winter months and everything is wet, cold and miserable there," said Captain Bailey. "It contains no gun bases and yet it was the best place in a war with Germany for the Grand Fleet to rendezvous. There were four or five entrances to the anchorage in Scapa Flow, these were blocked with the exception of one entrance which was kept open. The Portland Firth is one of the worst pieces of water in the British Isles."

"For the first five months of the war the fleet was engaged in constant patrol work all across the North Sea, close on to Heligoland. When our ships with the Canadian army arrived we hoped for an action, but the enemy did not attack, and at last we realized the Germans did not want to fight. The crews of the Grand Fleet were kept continually exercising and training whilst sweeping the North Sea. The ships were generally relieved—one week at sea and one week at anchorage. The destroyers and cruisers experienced particularly hard times in the cold, wet, foul weather."

Small Craft.

"An enormous number of small craft were built which were employed in mine sweeping and patrolling. These vessels had to be manned by the fleet, and intensive training of the crews was necessary. It would be rather unfair to criticize the action off the Dogger Bank, or the battle of Jutland, until Germany issues her official report of the engagements. The battle served some good purposes and it found Admiral Lord Beatty, who, by hanging on to the German fleet enabled the Grand Fleet to join in the fight. Shortly after the battle of Jutland the first mutiny broke out in the German fleet and that mutiny was responsible for the eventual defeat of the enemy."

In the beginning of the war the submarines were a somewhat unknown factor. It took Germany a long time to find out what the submarines could do. One of them got near our fleet and was sunk. They never attacked again. Scapa Flow was protected by

PURITY - QUALITY - ECONOMY

With the increased cost of labor and materials due to war conditions, it is not reasonable to suppose that a really first class baking powder can be made and sold at the old prices. Rather than sacrifice the quality of we found it necessary to make slight increases in price during the war period. Even though Magic Baking Powder may cost a few cents more than the ordinary kinds it is still by far the most economical baking powder on the market to-day when purity, strength and leavening qualities are taken into consideration.

mine-fields connected by wires to the shore. The German submarines never made a systematic attempt to sink our battle fleet.

Merchant Seamen.

The conduct of our merchant seamen was cause for great admiration. The man working below only has his first notice of being in action by hearing the explosion. It was also wonderful to see how men and officers came forward to man the ships. At one time in England it was thought we could not last another six months, and then new methods were adopted by the Admiralty and things improved. Convoys of 50 ships were formed and protected by cruisers and destroyers. The submarines were more actively employed. They took the place of the old privateers in the Napoleonic wars. The hydroplanes proved a wonderful invention. They were fitted in the trawlers. If one of them heard a submarine she would hunt for her until she got over her and then drop mines or bombs. Some of the submarines were rammed and others sunk by shot. They were sometimes difficult to sink, damage to the conning tower was not sufficient to send them down. Depth charges of 200 lbs. of gun-cotton were very destructive."

The meeting concluded with three cheers for Captain Bailey, the Royal Navy and the Mercantile Marine.
